Section Summary

FIRST MIGRATION TO THE AMERICAS

Many scientists believe that the first people arrived in North America during the last Ice Age. At that time the environment changed, and large amounts of water froze, forming glaciers. Water levels in the oceans dropped to more than 300 feet lower than they are today. A strip of land called the Bering Land Bridge was exposed between Asia and Alaska.

No one knows exactly when or how people crossed into North America, but there is evidence that people called Paleo-Indians crossed the bridge to Alaska between 38,000 and 10,000 BC. The migration took place over a long time. The descendents of the migrants went as far as the southern tip of South America. These people were hunter-gatherers, people who hunted animals and gathered wild plants for food. The environments they settled in created Native American societies.
EARLY MESOAMERICAN AND SOUTH AMERICAN SOCIETIES

Some of the earliest American cultures arose in Mesoamerica, a region that includes the southern part of what is now Mexico and northern Central America. The Olmec developed the earliest known civilization in Mesoamerica around 1200 BC. The Olmec are known for their stone buildings and sculptures. By 400 BC, when their civilization ended, trade had spread Olmec culture.

The Maya civilization followed the Olmec. The Maya built large stone temples, pyramids, and canals that controlled the flow of water through their cities. The Maya civilization began to collapse in the 900s, but historians are still not sure why.

The Aztec were fierce warriors who migrated to south and central Mexico in the mid-1100s. They conquered many towns, built a large empire, and controlled a huge trading network. The Aztec capital, Tenochtitlán (tay-nawch-teet-LAHN), founded in 1325 AD, became the greatest city in the Americas and one of the world’s largest cities. The Aztec became rich on trade and tributes paid by conquered people.

The Inca began as a small tribe in the Andes Mountains. In the mid-1400s, the Inca began expanding their empire until it included much of the western coast of South America and had more than 12 million people. The Inca people had a strong central government and a network of roads and bridges that connected all parts of the territory.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

MAIN IDEAS

1. Several early societies developed in North America long before Europeans explored the continent.
2. Geographic areas influenced Native American cultures.
3. Native American cultures shared beliefs about religion and land ownership.

Key Terms and People

pueblos aboveground houses made of a heavy clay called adobe kivas underground ceremonial chambers at the center of each Anasazi community totems ancestor or animal spirits of the Native Americans of the Pacific Northwest peepees cone-shaped shelters made of animal hides by the nomadic plains people matrilineal a society that traces ancestry through mothers
Iroquois League an alliance of Native Americans in northeastern North America

Section Summary

EARLY SOCIETIES

The earliest people in North America were hunter-gatherers. By 1500 BC people in the southwestern part of North America had farm cultures and grew maize. The Anasazi used irrigation to increase food production in the dry climate. They lived in pit houses dug into the ground and later began to build pueblos. The Anasazi often built complex houses on cliff walls to defend against attacks. They also built kivas, sacred areas at the center of the community.

The Anasazi began abandoning their villages after living in them for hundreds of years. Drought, disease, or raids by other tribes may have caused this move.

After 1000 BC several farming societies developed in the eastern part of North America. They built large burial mounds to honor their dead. More than 10,000 mounds have been found in the Ohio River valley alone. The largest city of the mound builders had about 30,000 people.

How would building on cliff walls provide protection for the Anasazi?

Why would drought be one of the possible reasons that the Anasazi moved from their homes?
NATIVE AMERICAN CULTURE AREAS

The culture of Native American people varied depending on geography. In the far north, in present-day Alaska and Canada, Native Americans survived primarily by hunting and fishing, living in small groups. Farther south, along the Pacific Northwest, larger groups thrived on the abundant wildlife. They carved tall poles with totem symbols of animal or ancestor spirits—which had religious and cultural meaning.

Farther south along the Pacific and the Sierra Nevada Mountains, people fished, hunted, gathered plants, and lived in small groups of families. In the drier areas of the southwest, Pueblo groups had to develop agriculture to adapt to the climate. They lived in towns of up to 1000 people. Others, such as the Apache and Navajo, formed nomadic groups that survived by hunting, foraging, or raiding other villages.

Most of the Native Americans of the Great Plains were nomadic hunters. They survived on the abundant wildlife of the grasslands, living in teepees made of animal hides. Some Plains groups were farmers, including the Pawnee, who had a matri- lineal society. In the east, many Native Americans had small villages and lived by farming, hunting, and fishing. The Iroquois League was an alliance of many groups that defended one another.

SHARED BELIEFS

Although they had many different cultures, Native Americans shared certain beliefs. Their religions were linked to nature, and they believed that the land was for the use of everyone.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Comparing Pick two Native American groups from two different culture areas. Make a chart comparing these two societies.

Section 3

MAIN IDEAS

1. West Africa developed three great kingdoms that grew wealthy through their control of trade.
2. Slaves became a valuable trade item in West Africa.

Key Terms and People

Berbers North African people who established trade routes through West Africa
Mansa Musa a Muslim king who ruled the Mali Empire at the height of its power and who spread Islamic influence through a large part of West Africa hajj in Islam, a pilgrimage to the holy city of Mecca mosques Islamic places of worship
Askia the Great the Muslim ruler who led Songhai to the height of its power

Section Summary

WEST AFRICA’S GREAT KINGDOMS

West African trade routes were originally controlled by the Berbers, a people of North Africa. Later, three great kingdoms developed in West Africa by winning control of these trade routes.

The first, Ghana, formed when farmers banded together to protect themselves from herders. They built armies whose superior iron weapons let them take control of the trade in salt and gold. Ghana raised money by forcing traders who passed through its lands to pay taxes. The trade routes brought Ghana in contact with different cultures and beliefs. In the 1060s a Muslim group attacked Ghana, forcing its leaders to convert to Islam. Although Ghana was weakened and eventually fell, the influence of Islam remained strong.

Like Ghana, Mali was located along the upper Niger River. The fertile soil and the control of trade on the river allowed Mali to become rich and powerful. Its most famous ruler was a Muslim king, Mansa Musa. Under his leadership Mali grew in wealth and power. Traders came to Timbuktu, an important city, to trade for salt, gold, metals, shells, and other goods.

Because he was a devout Muslim, Mansa Musa left Mali on a hajj, or a pilgrimage to Mecca. His influence helped bring Islam to a large part of West Africa. In the 1300s Mansa Musa conquered a kingdom called Songhai, whose people also lived along the Niger River. As the Mali empire weakened in the 1400s, Songhai regained independence.

One of the greatest Songhai rulers was Muhammad Ture. He chose a military title, askia, and became known as Askia the Great. Like Mansa Musa, Askia was a devout Muslim who supported education and learning. His cities had great mosques, schools, and libraries. He built a professional army and organized Songhai with governors who were loyal to him. Songhai declined soon after Askia the Great lost power.

WEST AFRICAN SLAVE TRADE

Slavery had existed in Africa and in many parts of the world for centuries. Starting in the 600s Arabs and then Europeans became slave traders. Criminals and people captured during battle could be sold into slavery as well as relatives of people who owed money.

The market for West African slaves increased as Muslim traders took black Africans to sell in North Africa. West Africa was also the home of many slaves taken to the Americas. The slave trade became a key part of the West African economy, contributing to the power of the great empires.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Elaborate Imagine that you live in one of the kingdoms discussed in this section. Write a brief description of what an average day might be like.

Section Summary

GREEK AND ROMAN GOVERNMENT

Ancient Greeks valued human reason and believed in the power of the human mind to think, explain, and understand life. Three of the greatest Greek thinkers were Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle, who were all philosophers and teachers. Aristotle taught that people should live lives based on reason, or clear and ordered thinking.

One of the most lasting contributions of the Greeks is their political system. Established during the Classical Period, democracy is the system in which people rule themselves. Rome later formed a type of democracy called a republic, in which people elect representatives to rule them. These political ideas still influence world governments, including that of the United States.

MIDDLE AGES
After the fall of the Roman empire, Europe was divided into many small kingdoms. A system called feudalism was established in which nobles gave knights land in exchange for protection.

In the 1000s important changes began to occur in Europe. The Crusades brought trade with places outside Europe, introducing new products and ideas. Trade also brought a disease known as the Black Death that killed much of the population of Europe and caused a shortage of workers. These changes resulted in the development of a middle-class made up of artisans and merchants. Cities became important as commercial centers for trade.

RENAISSANCE
The key feature of the Renaissance was a love of art and education. The search for knowledge spread to all fields. During the Renaissance the focus shifted from religion to people. Two of the great Renaissance artists, Michelangelo and Leonardo da Vinci, are famous for their paintings, sculpture, and architecture, which reflected the value of the human being. The printing press developed by Johannes Gutenberg helped spread new ideas in science, math, and literature.

Increased trade caused a commercial revolution. Italian cities became important trading centers. As commerce grew, so did the need for banks. Merchants created joint-stock companies in which groups of people invested together.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY
Critical Thinking: Evaluate Make a chart showing some of democracy’s advantages.

Key Terms and People

Leif Eriksson  Viking who landed in present-day Canada in AD1000
Henry the Navigator  Portuguese prince who established a school of navigation and paid for expeditions astrolabe  a device used to determine location based on the position of the stars caravels  Portuguese ships that used triangular sails to sail against the wind

Academic Vocabulary

effect  the result of an action or decision

Section Summary

SKILLED VIKING SAILORS

The Vikings were the first Europeans to make contact with North America. They were skilled sailors who developed a new style of ship that was more stable on rough seas.

In the year 1000, Leif Eriksson, the son of Erik the Red, set off for Greenland. Strong winds blew his ship off course, and he landed on the North American coast. The Vikings settled in a coastal area that Eriksson called Vinland, but they left after a few years. Europeans did not return to the continent for centuries.

PRINCE HENRY THE NAVIGATOR

In the early 1400s Portugal became a leader in world exploration. Although he never set out on a voyage himself, Prince Henry the Navigator helped Portugal’s explorers succeed. He built an observatory and a school of navigation to teach better methods of sailing. Europeans had several reasons to explore the world. They wanted spices from Asia, and they wanted to learn more about Asia and its culture. They also wanted to convert Asians to the Christian faith.

European sailors were able to travel in open seas without landmarks to guide them because of new technology. The astrolabe was used to chart a ship’s location based on the position of the stars. The caravel was a new kind of ship that was smaller, lighter, and easier to steer. Caravels used triangular sails that allowed ships to sail against the wind and rudders that improved steering.

A SEA ROUTE TO ASIA

In the 1400s Portuguese sailors traveled south along the coast of Africa, setting up trading posts along the way. In 1497 a Portuguese expedition led by Vasco da Gama sailed around the southern tip of Africa and reached India. These successful voyages had a number of effects, both positive and negative. Portugal’s wealth and power increased. However, these travels eventually led to the spread of the slave trade. Other European nations soon began looking for their own sea routes to Asia.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Making Inferences The Portuguese had laws that included severe penalties for letting sailors from other countries see the maps the Portuguese created from their expeditions. Write a paragraph explaining why they wanted to keep these maps secret.

Section 2

Main Ideas
1. Christopher Columbus sailed across the Atlantic Ocean and reached a continent that was previously unknown to him.
2. After Columbus’s voyages, other explorers sailed to the Americas.

Key Terms and People
- Christopher Columbus: a sailor from Genoa, Italy
- Line of Demarcation: an imaginary boundary in the Atlantic dividing Spanish and Portuguese territories
- Treaty of Tordesillas: agreement between Spain and Portugal moving the Line of Demarcation
- Ferdinand Magellan: Portuguese navigator whose expedition circumnavigated the globe
- Circumnavigate: to go all the way around the globe
- Columbian Exchange: the transfer of plants and animals between the Americas and Asia, Africa, and Europe

Section Summary

COLUMBUS SAILS ACROSS THE ATLANTIC

Christopher Columbus, a sailor from Genoa, Italy, believed that he could reach Asia by sailing west across the Atlantic Ocean. He asked King Ferdinand and Queen Isabella of Spain to pay for an expedition. In return, he promised great riches, new territory, and Catholic converts.

Sailing with three ships, Columbus reached an island in the Bahamas in 1492. Columbus thought he had found a new route to Asia. In reality, he had reached another continent that was unknown to him. Columbus made three more journeys to the Americas during his lifetime. When he died in 1506 he still believed that he had reached Asia.

The voyages of Columbus changed the way Europeans saw the world and also created conflict between European nations. In 1493 the pope issued a decree that created the Line of Demarcation.
This imaginary boundary divided the Atlantic Ocean between Spain and Portugal. The Portuguese king believed the arrangement favored Spain, so the leaders of the two nations signed the Treaty of Tordesillas. This treaty moved the Line of Demarcation 800 miles further west and prevented a war between the two countries.

OTHER EXPLORERS SAIL TO THE AMERICAS

After Columbus other explorers sailed across the Atlantic Ocean. In 1501 Amerigo Vespucci became convinced that he had not reached Asia but had discovered a ‘new world.’ A German mapmaker labeled the continents across the ocean as America in his honor.

Vasco Núñez de Balboa, a Spanish explorer, crossed the jungles of Central America to see the Pacific Ocean in 1513. In 1519 Portuguese navigator Ferdinand Magellan sailed around the southern tip of South America and into the Pacific. Although Magellan was killed in the Philippine Islands, one ship from his expedition was the first to circumnavigate, or go all the way around, the globe.

European explorers and settlers took plants and animals with them to America and brought back American plants and animals. This transfer was called the Columbian Exchange because it started with the explorations of Columbus. Over time a trading pattern developed, involving the exchange of raw materials, manufactured products, and slaves among Europe, Africa, and the Americas.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Elaborating Imagine you are a sailor on one of Columbus’s ships. Write a short poem about the first sighting of land in the present-day Bahamas.
New Empires in the Americas

Section 3

Main Ideas
1. Spanish conquistadors conquered the Aztec and Inca empires.
2. Spanish explorers traveled through the borderlands of New Spain, claiming more land.
3. Spanish settlers treated Native Americans harshly, forcing them to work on plantations and in mines.

Key Terms and People

- conquistadors: Spanish soldiers who led military expeditions in the Americas
- Hernán Cortés: conquistador who conquered the Aztec empire
- Moctezuma II: ruler of the Aztec empire
- Francisco Pizarro: a conquistador who captured the Inca capital and killed the Inca leaders
- encomienda system: a system that gave settlers the right to tax Native Americans or to make them work
- plantations: large farms that grew just one kind of crop and made huge profits for their owners
- Bartolomé de Las Casas: a priest who encouraged better treatment of Native Americans

Section Summary

Spanish Conquistadors
The Spanish sent conquistadors to the Americas on military expeditions. Conquistador Hernán Cortés went to present-day Mexico in 1519. He had heard of land to the west ruled by Moctezuma II, the king of the Aztec empire. The Spaniards believed the Aztec lands were a rich source of gold and silver. They also wanted to convert the Aztec to Christianity.

Although they were greatly outnumbered, the conquistadors had superior weapons and formed alliances with enemies of the Aztec. Cortés took control of the Aztec capital and killed Moctezuma. Smallpox and other European diseases sped up the fall of the Aztec empire.

Why might Cortés have wanted to conquer the Aztec?

What advantage did the Spanish have over the Aztec?
While seeking gold Francisco Pizarro led his troops to capture the great Inca capital at Cuzco. Within a few years Pizarro had conquered the entire Inca empire. The Spanish then began to create a vast empire which they called New Spain. They established settlements to serve as trading posts, missions to convert local Native Americans to Catholicism, and military bases.

EXPLORING THE BORDERLANDS OF NEW SPAIN
Spain’s empire in America extended well beyond the lands taken from the Aztec and Inca. Regions claimed by the Spanish explorers included the island of Puerto Rico, the coast of present-day Florida, and the coastal regions of the Gulf of Mexico. The Spanish also explored what is now the southwestern United States, looking for cities of gold that were rumored to exist there. They traveled through unclaimed areas of Texas, Oklahoma, and as far north as Kansas.

SPANISH TREATMENT OF NATIVE AMERICANS
California was among the last borderlands settled by the Spanish. To pay back settlers for their work, Spain established the encomienda system. It gave settlers the right to tax Native Americans and make them work. Most of the workers were treated as slaves and forced to work on plantations in New Spain. Many Native Americans died of disease and exhaustion. The priest Bartolomé de Las Casas spoke out against the terrible treatment of Native Americans.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY
Critical Thinking: Identifying Cause and Effect Make a chart showing the causes and effects of Spain’s conquests in the Americas.

Why did Pizarro first enter the Inca empire?

Why might de Las Casas have spoken out against the encomienda system?
New Empires in the Americas

Section 4

MAIN IDEAS

1. Events in Europe affected settlement of North America.
2. Several explorers searched for a Northwest Passage to the Pacific Ocean.
3. European nations raced to establish empires in North America.

Key Terms and People

Protestant Reformation  a religious movement that began as an effort to reform the Catholic Church

Protestants  the reformers who protested the Catholic Church’s practices

Spanish Armada  the Spanish fleet of huge warships

Northwest Passage  a path through North America that would allow ships to sail from the Atlantic to the Pacific

Jacques Cartier  French explorer who sailed up the Saint Lawrence River looking for the Northwest Passage

charter  a document giving permission to start a colony

Section Summary

EVENTS IN EUROPE

In 1517 a priest named Martin Luther launched the Protestant Reformation. His followers were called Protestants. Luther said the Catholic Church was too rich and abused its powers. The printing press helped spread Protestant ideas because large numbers of Bibles could be printed. More people could read the Bible on their own instead of depending on priests to explain it.

Often conflicts between Catholics and Protestants led to war. In the late 1500s French Catholics fought French Protestants known as Huguenots. Many Huguenots traveled to the Americas for religious freedom. In 1534 King Henry VIII established the Church of England, or Anglican Church. Henry declared himself head of this Protestant church. By breaking with the Catholic church, King Henry made himself the enemy of other European rulers who were Catholics.

How did the printing press help spread Protestant ideas?

What were French Protestants called?
King Philip II of Spain, a Catholic ruler, put together a large fleet called the Spanish Armada to defeat the Protestant nation of England. England had fewer ships, but they were quick. In July 1588 the English navy defeated the Armada. The defeat hurt the Spanish, whose economy was in trouble because of inflation. Inflation is a rise in prices caused by an increase in the amount of money in use.

SEARCH FOR A NORTHWEST PASSAGE

European nations wanted to find a Northwest Passage in North America that would allow ships to sail from the Atlantic to the Pacific. Early searches explored the coast from Canada to North Carolina. Jacques Cartier explored the Saint Lawrence River and claimed lands for France. The Northwest Passage was not found, but the voyages led to more interest in North America.

EUROPEAN PRESENCE IN NORTH AMERICA

Spain and Portugal claimed much of South and Central America but left most of North America unexplored. In the late 1500s Sir Walter Raleigh of England received a charter to found a colony in present-day Virginia. The first colonists did not stay, but Raleigh sent more colonists. Those colonists disappeared.

France built settlements in Florida, but the Spanish soon drove them out. In the 1600s French colonies were established on the Saint Lawrence River. The French claimed lands extending to the Mississippi River. The Dutch founded the town of New Amsterdam on Manhattan Island. Swedish settlers started New Sweden along the Delaware River, but it was conquered by the Dutch colonists in 1655.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Summarizing Write a bulleted list summarizing the early settlements of the Americas.
New Empires in the Americas

Section 5

MAIN IDEAS

1. European diseases wiped out much of the Native American population, causing colonists to look for a new labor force.
2. Europeans enslaved millions of Africans and sent them to work in their colonies.
3. Slaves in the Americas created a distinct culture.

Key Terms and People

immune having a natural resistance to a disease

Middle Passage the voyage across the Atlantic that enslaved Africans were forced to endure

African Diaspora the scattering of African people due to slavery

Academic Vocabulary

structure the way something is organized

Section Summary

THE NEED FOR A NEW LABOR FORCE

Diseases like measles, smallpox, and typhus had afflicted Europeans for many centuries before they came to the New World. As a result, Europeans were more immune to the diseases than Native Americans who had never been exposed to them at all. Therefore, these European diseases had a devastating effect on the Native American population. Millions died in the years after Columbus reached the New World.

Now the European colonists needed a new workforce for their plantations. As Africans had already developed some immunity to European diseases, the colonists decided that slaves from West Africa could be the solution to the labor problem.

THE SLAVE TRADE

In 1510 the Spanish government legalized the sale of slaves in its colonies. Over the next century, more than a million African slaves were brought to the Spanish and Portuguese colonies. The English and Dutch were also active slave traders.

Enslaved people were often captured in the interior of Africa, chained, and forced to march up to 1,000 miles to the coast. They were then chained together and packed as cargo in the lower decks of ships crossing the Atlantic Ocean. This voyage was known as the Middle Passage. In the crowded ships, disease spread quickly. Many of the slaves died of sickness, suffocation, or malnutrition during the voyage.

Between the 1520s and the 1860s, about 12 million Africans were shipped across the Atlantic as slaves. The slave trade led to the African Diaspora. Slaves had few rights in the colonies and were considered to be property. The treatment of enslaved Africans varied, but severe treatment and dreadful punishments were often part of American slavery.

SLAVE CULTURE IN THE AMERICAS

Slaves in America came from many parts of Africa. They spoke different languages and had different cultural backgrounds, but they also shared many customs and viewpoints. They built a new culture on the things they had in common.

Families were a key part of slave culture, but slave families faced many challenges. A family was often broken apart when members were sold to different owners. Religion was a refuge for slaves. Slave religion was primarily Christian, but it also included traditional elements from African religions. Religion gave slaves a sense of self worth and hope for salvation. Slaves used songs and folktales to tell stories of sorrow, hope, agony, and joy.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Elaborate  Write a song or folktale that reflects the experiences of enslaved Africans. Your song or folktale should reflect the feelings of sorrow, hope, agony and joy that were included in the songs and folktales of slaves.

SETTLEMENT IN JAMESTOWN

Life in Jamestown was hard. Few colonists knew how to grow crops for food. Captain John Smith worried about this. Many colonists starved. The Powhatan helped the colonists learn to grow crops.

Pocahontas helped unite the Powhatan and the colonists, but she died in 1617. Fighting broke out between the colonists and the Powhatan and went on for the next 20 years. The colony existed under the authority of a governor chosen by the king.
DAILY LIFE IN VIRGINIA
Colonists began forming large farms called plantations. At first indentured servants worked on plantations. In 1619 the first Africans came to Virginia. Wealthy farmers began to use slave labor.

In 1676 Nathaniel Bacon, a wealthy frontier farmer, led Bacon’s Rebellion. Bacon and his followers burned Jamestown.

OTHER SOUTHERN COLONIES
Maryland was founded south of Virginia as a new colony for Catholics. In the 1640s Protestants began moving in. Religious problems divided Protestants and Catholics. The Toleration Act of 1649 made limiting religious rights of Christians a crime in Maryland.

The Carolinas and Georgia were formed south of Virginia and Maryland. South Carolina had many large plantations, and owners bought slaves to work on them. In Georgia many huge rice plantations were worked by thousands of slaves.

ECONOMIES OF THE SOUTHERN COLONIES
The economies of the southern colonies were based on farming. Many small farms and some small plantations meant a large group of workers was needed. African slaves became these workers. Slavery was brutal. A former slave named Olaudah Equiano wrote that slaves were often tortured, murdered, and treated with barbarity. Most of the southern states passed slave codes to control slaves.

Section 2

MAIN IDEAS
1. The Pilgrims and Puritans came to America to avoid religious persecution.
2. Religion and government were closely linked in the New England colonies.
3. The New England economy was based on trade and farming.
4. Education was important in the New England colonies.

Key Terms and People

Puritans a Protestant group that wanted to reform, or purify, the Church of England Pilgrims a Protestant group that cut all ties with the Church of England and was punished immigrants people who have left the country of their birth to live in another country
Mayflower Compact a legal contract male passengers on the Mayflower signed agreeing to have fair laws to protect the general good
Squanto a Patuxet Indian who had lived in Europe and spoke English
John Winthrop the leader of Puritans who left England for Massachusetts seeking religious freedom
Anne Hutchinson a Puritan who claimed to receive her religious views directly from God and who was forced to leave the Massachusetts Bay Colony

Section Summary

PILGRIMS AND PURITANS
The Pilgrims were a group of Puritans who suffered persecution in England. They became immigrants, first settling in the Netherlands and then sailing to America.

When they reached America, the Pilgrims signed the Mayflower Compact. This was one of the first times English colonists tried to govern themselves. Earlier, in 1215, English nobles had forced the king to give them some rights in Magna Carta. Later the English Bill of Rights provided more liberties.

The Pilgrims learned to fertilize their soil from Squanto. They invited him and 90 Wampanoag guests to a feast now known as Thanksgiving.

Religion and education played important parts in the Pilgrims' lives, which centered on families.

Everyone worked hard. Women had rights that they did not have in England.

Puritans and merchants founded the Massachusetts Bay colony. Tens of thousands of English men, women and children would immigrate to it. John Winthrop led one group. Puritans believed they had a sacred agreement with God to build a Christian colony.

RELIGION AND GOVERNMENT IN NEW ENGLAND

Politics and religion were closely linked in Puritan New England. Some self-government existed. However, only the chosen male church members could vote.

Some Puritans had different religious views than others. Minister Roger Williams supported the separation of the church from politics. He founded Providence. Anne Hutchinson was forced to leave the colony because of her religious ideas.

NEW ENGLAND ECONOMY

The New England colonies had a hard climate and rocky soil. The kind of farming done in Virginia was impossible there. Instead, they traded goods, fished, built ships, and became skilled craftspeople.

EDUCATION IN THE COLONIES

New England parents wanted their children to read the Bible. They made laws requiring the education of children. The colonists also founded Harvard College to teach ministers.

Section 3

MAIN IDEAS

1. The English created New York and New Jersey from former Dutch territory.
2. William Penn established the colony of Pennsylvania.
3. The economy of the middle colonies was supported by trade and staple crops.

Key Terms and People

Peter Stuyvesant  director general who took control of New Amsterdam beginning in 1647
Quakers  a Protestant religious group founded by George Fox in the mid-1600s in England
William Penn  a Quaker leader who began the Pennsylvania colony
Staple crops  crops that are always needed, such as wheat, barley, and oats

Section Summary

NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY

In 1613 the Dutch formed New Netherland as a base for trading fur with the Iroquois. They traded fur mostly in the town of New Amsterdam on Manhattan Island. Large land grants and religious tolerance meant Jews, French Huguenots, Puritans, and others came to the colony.

Peter Stuyvesant ruled the colony for many years. Then in 1664 an English fleet gained control of New Netherland without any fighting. New Amsterdam became New York City, named in honor of the Duke of York. New York was the first of the middle colonies.

The Duke of York made two men proprietors, or governors, of New Jersey. The colony rested between the Hudson and Delaware Rivers. Dutch, Finns, Swedes, Scots, and others lived there.

PENN’S COLONY

One of the biggest religious groups in New Jersey was the Society of Friends, or the Quakers. Their religious practices were different. They believed in the equality of men and women before God. They also backed religious tolerance for all groups. The Quakers’ beliefs angered many. They were treated badly in both England and America.

William Penn started a colony named Pennsylvania. He offered religious freedom to all Christians. He created a way to change colony laws based on what the people wanted. Many Quakers settled in Pennsylvania. Penn named his capital Philadelphia, which means “the city of Brotherly Love.”

ECONOMY OF THE MIDDLE COLONIES

A good climate and fertile land meant the colonists could grow a large quantity of staple crops, unlike colonists in New England. Some slaves worked in the middle colonies but not as many as in the south. Indentured servants did more of the labor.

By the 1700s Philadelphia and New York City had grown into large cities. Trade was important to the middle colonies. Women ran some businesses and practiced as doctors, nurses, or midwives.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Evaluating Think about the two colonies. How are they similar? How are they different? Decide which colony you would like to live in. Then write a short essay explaining why you chose the colony you did. Illustrate your essay.

MAIN IDEAS

2. English trade laws limited free trade in the colonies.
3. The Great Awakening and the Enlightenment led to ideas of political equality among many colonists.
4. The French and Indian War gave England control of more land in North America.

Key Terms and People

town meeting an assembly in which colonists decided issues and made laws
English Bill of Rights an act passed in 1689 that reduced the powers of the English monarch and gave Parliament more power triangular trade indirect trade between the American colonies and Britain
Middle Passage name for the slaves' voyage across the Atlantic
Jonathan Edwards important leader of the Great Awakening
Great Awakening an awakening in the religious lives of colonists
Enlightenment a movement during the 1700s that focused on the use of reason and logic to improve society
Pontiac Native American leader who led a rebellion in the Ohio Valley in 1763

Section Summary

COLONIAL GOVERNMENTS
The House of Burgesses helped make laws in Virginia. In New England, colonists at town meeting decided local issues. The middle colonies used both county courts and town meetings.

King James II of England thought the colonies were too independent. He united the northern colonies and limited their powers. In 1689 the English Bill of Rights shifted power from the monarch to Parliament, the British governing body. These rights were not extended to the colonists.

ENGLISH TRADE LAWS
England controlled its American colonies partly... to earn money. Parliament passed Navigation Acts that required colonists to trade only with Britain. However, some colonists wanted to buy and sell goods at the market offering the best prices.

In a deadly version of triangular trade, New England colonists traded rum for slaves from the African coast. The slave trade forced 10 million Africans across the Atlantic Ocean. In the Middle Passage thousands of them died.

GREAT AWAKENING AND ENLIGHTENMENT

During the Great Awakening talk of spiritual equality made some people, such as Jonathan Edwards, think about political equality. Enlightenment thinker John Locke said people should obey their rulers only if the state protected life, liberty, and property.

In 1675 a war erupted between New England colonists and some American Indians. Metacomet, who was also known as King Philip, led the Wampanoag. Each side killed men, women, and children. The fighting ended in 1676.

THE FRENCH AND INDIAN WAR

The British and the French both wanted to control certain territory in North America. The French and Indian War was about the British wanting to settle in the Ohio Valley and the French wanting it for the fur trade. After the war Britain won Canada and all French lands east of the Mississippi River.

The Ohio Valley proved good for farming, but Native American leaders opposed British settlements. American Indian Chief Pontiac led followers against the British. He later gave up, but King George III banned colonists from settling on Indian lands. Many settlers ignored the ban.

MAIN IDEAS

2. The Boston Massacre caused colonial resentment toward Great Britain.
3. Colonists protested the British tax on tea with the Boston Tea Party.
4. Great Britain responded to colonial actions by passing the Intolerable Acts.

Key Terms and People

Samuel Adams  Boston leader who believed Parliament could not tax the colonists without their permission
Committees of Correspondence  method of communication between towns and colonies about British laws
Stamp Act of 1765  required colonists to pay for an official stamp when buying paper items
Boston Massacre  shooting by British soldiers killed five colonists
Tea Act  an act allowing a British company to sell cheap tea directly to the colonists
Boston Tea Party  a protest in which colonists dressed as American Indians and dumped 340 tea chests from British ships into Boston Harbor
Intolerable Acts  laws passed to punish colonists for the Boston Tea Party

Section Summary

GREAT BRITAIN RAISES TAXES
Parliament raised the colonists’ taxes for money to pay for the French and Indian War. The tax money was also used to keep a British army in North America to protect the colonists against American Indian attacks. Parliament also tried harder to arrest smugglers avoiding taxes.

Many colonists believed Britain had no right to tax them without their permission. Colonists communicated their ideas about British laws in Committees of Correspondence. Samuel Adams and James Otis spread the slogan “No Taxation without Representation.” Colonists chose to boycott, refusing to buy British goods. They hoped Parliament would end the new taxes. The Stamp Act of 1765 meant a tax had to be paid on legal documents, licenses, and other items.

The Townshend Acts charged taxes on imported glass, lead, paints, paper, and tea. Boston’s Sons of Liberty attacked the customs houses to protest the taking of a ship on suspicion of smuggling. British soldiers came in 1768 to restore order.

BOSTON MASSACRE

On March 5, 1770, a few troops fired on Bostonians who were throwing snowballs at them. That led to the Boston Massacre. The soldiers and their officer were charged with murder. A jury found the officer and six soldiers acted in self-defense and were not guilty. Two soldiers were convicted of accidental killing. This calmed Boston for a while.

THE BOSTON TEA PARTY

Parliament ended almost all the Townshend Acts but left the tax on tea. Colonists united against the Tea Act. In November 1773 the Boston Tea Party showed the colonists’ spirit of rebellion.

THE INTOLERABLE ACTS

The Boston Tea Party made the new British Prime Minister very angry. Parliament punished Boston by passing the Intolerable Acts. The laws closed Boston Harbor until the colonists paid for the lost tea. Other parts of the Intolerable Acts angered the colonists even more.

Section Summary

FIRST CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Delegates to the First Continental Congress were worried about the relationship between Great Britain and its American colonies. The delegates debated whether violence was avoidable. They encouraged the peaceful boycott of British goods but also began preparing for war. They drafted a Declaration of Rights, but King George refused to consider it. Colonists who chose to fight for independence were known as Patriots.
“SHOT HEARD ‘ROUND THE WORLD”

On April 19, 1775, 700 Redcoats set out for Concord. A British general sent the soldiers to destroy a weapons storehouse they thought was there. Three colonists rode out on horseback to warn that the British were coming. Seventy armed minutemen waited for the British at Lexington. To this day nobody knows who fired the first shot. The British killed eight minutemen, then went on to Concord where they destroyed a few buildings. In reaction the minutemen fired on the Redcoats. The British suffered many casualties and were forced to retreat.

SECOND CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

At the Second Continental Congress some delegates called for war while others wanted peace. The Congress named the Massachusetts militia the Continental Army. The army’s commander was George Washington. Delegates signed the Olive Branch Petition asking King George to make peace. He would not consider it.

EARLY BATTLES

On June 17, 1775, the British in Boston found colonial forces dug in on Breed’s Hill. When the British crossed the harbor in boats to take the hill, the colonists opened fire. The British took the hill on their third try. But the Battle of Bunker Hill proved the colonists could hold their own. Soon after, General Washington took command of the Continental Army in Boston. He set up cannons from Fort Ticonderoga to fire on the British. On March 7, 1776, the British retreated from Boston.

Section 2

MAIN IDEAS
1. Thomas Paine’s Common Sense led many colonists to support independence.
2. Colonists had to choose sides when independence was declared.
3. The Declaration of Independence did not address the rights of all colonists.

Key Terms and People

Common Sense a 47-page pamphlet that argued against British rule over America

Thomas Paine author of Common Sense, who wrote that citizens, not monarchs, should make laws

Thomas Jefferson the main author of the Declaration of Independence

Declaration of Independence the document that formally announced the colonies’ break from Great Britain

Loyalists colonists, sometimes called Tories, who remained loyal to Britain

Section Summary

Paine’s Common Sense Common Sense was published anonymously, or without the name of its author, who was Thomas Paine. At this time the idea that citizens should pass laws made news. As word of the pamphlet spread throughout the colonies, it eventually sold about 500,000 copies. The pamphlet made a strong case for political and economic freedom. It supported the right to military self-defense. Common Sense changed the way many colonists viewed their king.

Independence is Declared

The first point argued by Thomas Jefferson in the Declaration of Independence was that all men possess unalienable rights, or rights that cannot be denied. These rights include ‘life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.” Jefferson also maintained that King George III had trampled on the colonists’ rights by supporting unfair laws and wrongly meddling in colonial governments. In addition Jefferson argued that the colonies had the right to independence from Britain. He believed in the Enlightenment idea of the social contract. This idea says that citizens should agree to be governed only when rulers and governments support their rights. Jefferson said that King George III had violated the social contract, so the colonies should not obey his laws.

On July 4, 1776, the Continental Congress voted in favor of the Declaration of Independence. In approving the Declaration, the Congress finally broke away from Great Britain. Today we celebrate the Fourth of July as the birthday of our nation.

Not everyone rejoiced over the approval of the Declaration. Patriots and Loyalists became divided. Sometimes family members were on opposite sides during the war. More than 50,000 Loyalists left the colonies during the Revolution.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS
Looking back, we realize that the Declaration paid no attention to many colonists. Abigail Adams, wife of delegate John Adams, tried to influence him to include women in the Declaration. It did not happen. Enslaved African Americans also had no rights under the Declaration. Slavery was legal in all colonies in July 1776. The Revolutionary War would not end the battle over slavery, even though New England states moved to end it by the 1780s.

SUPPORTING THE WAR EFFORT
Life in the army was hard, but the Patriots knew they were fighting for an important cause. More than 230,000 mostly young men served in the Continental Army. After the British promised to free any slaves who fought for them, the Continental Army allowed free African Americans to serve. Women played an important role in the war by helping to supply the army and serving as messengers, nurses, and spies.

Underline the sentence that tells how some women served the war effort.
DEFEATS AND VICTORIES
At first the Continental Army lost several battles. Then the Patriots won an important victory. British General Howe, who thought the rebellion would soon be over, left New Jersey in the hands of Hessian mercenaries. The Patriots surprised the Hessians and won the Battle of Trenton.

British General John Burgoyne planned to cut off New England from the other colonies. His strategy required perfect timing. The Patriots surrounded Burgoyne and won the Battle of Saratoga, which was the turning point of the war.

HELP FROM EUROPE
Britain's enemies, France and Spain, began to help the Patriots. Holland also helped the Patriots. The Marquis de Lafayette, Baron Friedrich von Steuben, and Bernardo de Gálvez joined the war on the Patriots' side.

WINTER AT VALLEY FORGE
The winter of 1777 turned brutally cold and snowy. General Washington settled his troops at Valley Forge, where they bore hardships with courage and drilled to become better soldiers.

WAR AT SEA AND IN THE WEST
The small Continental Navy sunk hundreds of British ships. John Paul Jones fought a battle with the British in which his ship took heavy damage. He fought on, and the British ship surrendered. In the West, George Rogers Clark led Patriots against British trading villages and Fort Sackville. Clark's campaigns hurt British support in the West.

Francis Marion a Patriot leader who used hit-and-run attacks, known as guerilla warfare

Comte de Rochambeau commander of 4,000 French troops that aided the Patriot forces at the Battle of Yorktown

Battle of Yorktown the last major battle of the American Revolution

Treaty of Paris of 1783 the peace agreement in which Great Britain recognized the independence of the United States

Section Summary

WAR IN THE SOUTH

The war in the northern colonies did not go as the British government had hoped. The northern Patriots were tough to beat. The British moved the war into the South, where they believed large groups of Loyalists would help them win. General Henry Clinton led the British troops. The British plan worked at first.

The war in the South proved especially nasty. Patriots and Loyalists engaged in direct fighting. The British wiped out crops, farm animals, and property. Georgia fell to the British. Next, the British conquered the port of Charleston, South Carolina. The Patriots failed to retake Camden, South Carolina.

Patriot General Nathanael Greene arrived to shape up the army. Meanwhile, under the leadership of Francis Marion, the Southern patriots used surprise attacks to cut off British communication and supply lines. The British could not capture Marion and his men.
BATTLE OF YORKTOWN

The Patriots were in trouble in early 1781. They had little money for paying soldiers and buying supplies. The British held most of the South as well as Philadelphia and New York.

With 16,000 soldiers, Washington's force surrounded Cornwallis. For weeks the French-American force wore down the British troops. Finally, the British surrendered. The Patriots captured 8,000 British prisoners at the Battle of Yorktown.

THE TREATY OF PARIS

Britain lost most of its army at Yorktown and could not afford a new one. So Great Britain and America began peace talks. Delegates took more than two years to reach a peace agreement.

The Treaty of Paris of 1783 gave the United States independence from Great Britain. It also created America’s borders. In a separate treaty, Britain returned Florida to the Spanish. The Patriots’ courage had won the Revolutionary War.

Section Summary

IDEAS ABOUT GOVERNMENT

After winning independence from Great Britain, the United States needed to form new governments. The Americans first looked to English law for ideas. The English Bill of Rights and Magna Carta gave them inspiration. Ideas from the Enlightenment also influenced them. English philosopher John Locke had thought the government had a duty to guard people’s rights.

Where did Americans find ideas for their government?

__________________________
In 1639 the people of Connecticut had created a government plan considered to be the first written constitution in the colonies. During the American Revolution nearly every state wrote a constitution to ensure that citizens elected representatives to make laws. Suffrage varied considerably from state to state. Some constitutions banned slavery. The Virginia Statute for Religious Freedom was an example of a law providing religious freedom.

ARTICLES OF CONFEDERATION
The Continental Congress named a Committee of Thirteen, with one member from each colony. This committee drafted the Articles of Confederation. Under the Articles the Confederation Congress had limited powers to guard the people’s freedoms. Each state had one vote in the Congress. The Congress had powers, but it could only ask the states for money and soldiers. States could refuse these requests. After some conflicts the Articles were ratified by all the states to form the first American government.

NORTHWEST TERRITORY
Congress decided to raise money to pay debts by selling the ordinance lands. Congress passed the Land Ordinance of 1785. The Northwest Ordinance of 1787 formed the Northwest Territory. It was then split up into several smaller territories. When the population of a territory hit 60,000, its settlers could draft their own constitution and ask to join the Union. Slavery was banned in the Northwest Territory.

Section Summary

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS
The Continental Army broke up soon after the signing of the Treaty of Paris of 1783. The Articles of Confederation provided no way to raise a new army. The United States had a hard time guarding against foreign threats.

Problems arose in trading with Britain, which closed many British ports to U.S. ships. The British also forced American merchants to pay high tariffs. U.S. merchants increased prices to pay them, and costs were passed on to customers.

In 1784 Spanish officials shut down the lower Mississippi River to U.S. shipping. Western farmers and merchants used the river to ship goods east and overseas. The U.S. government failed to work out an agreement with Spain. Critics thought Spain would have negotiated longer if America had a strong military force. The loss of the British West Indies markets meant farmers could not sell goods there.

Why did tariffs hurt U.S. citizens?
________________________

Point out one weakness in the Articles of Confederation.
________________________
U.S. exports dropped while lower-priced British goods kept entering America. Congress could not pass tariffs.

ECONOMIC PROBLEMS
Trade problems among the states, war debt, and a poor economy hurt the states. The Confederation Congress had no power to regulate interstate commerce. States looked out only for their own trade interests.

In addition, states had trouble paying off war debts. They printed paper money, but it had no gold or silver backing and little value. This caused inflation, which occurs when increased prices for goods and services combine with the reduced value of money. The loss of trade with Britain coupled with inflation created a depression.

SHAYS’S REBELLION
Massachusetts collected taxes on land to pay its war debt. This policy hurt farmers who owned land. The courts made them sell their property to pay taxes. Daniel Shays and his followers defied a state order that would stop Shays’s Rebellion. They were defeated by state troops, and 14 leaders were sentenced to death. However, the state freed most, including Shays. Many citizens agreed with Shays.

CALLS FOR CHANGE
The weaknesses of the Confederation government led leaders, including James Madison and Alexander Hamilton, to ask all 13 states to send delegates to a Constitutional Convention. It was held in Philadelphia in May 1787 to revise the Articles of Confederation and create a better constitution.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY
Critical Thinking: Predicting Consider how the new U.S. Constitution might change the Articles of Confederation. List three key changes.

Section Summary

CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION
The Constitutional Convention met in May 1787 in Philadelphia, where America had declared independence. Twelve states sent delegates. Most delegates were educated and had served in state legislatures or Congress. James Madison attended.

GREAT COMPROMISE
States disagreed about representation, tariffs, slavery, and strength of the central government. In the Virginia Plan, the legislature would be selected on the basis of population. The New Jersey Plan proposed that each state receive an equal number of votes. The Great Compromise gave every state, regardless of size, an equal vote in the upper house of the legislature. Each state would be represented in the lower house based on population.

THREE-FIFTHS COMPROMISE
The Three-Fifths Compromise satisfied northerners, who wanted the number of slaves in southern states to determine taxes but not representation. It also satisfied southern delegates, who wanted slaves counted as part of their state populations to increase their power. The delegates agreed to end the slave trade in 20 years.

THE LIVING CONSTITUTION
The delegates wanted to protect popular sovereignty. They thought federalism could accomplish that. States would control government functions not assigned to the federal government.

CHECKS AND BALANCES
The Constitution balances power among the legislative branch, the executive branch, and the judicial branch. The Constitution’s framers established checks and balances to prevent any one branch from becoming too strong. The Constitution was completed in September 1787. Congress and then the states ratified the Constitution.

FEDERALISTS AND ANTIFEDERALISTS

Antifederalists believed that the Constitutional Convention should not have formed a new government. Delegate George Mason opposed the Constitution because it did not contain a section that guaranteed individual rights.

Most Federalists thought that the Constitution provided a good balance of power. Many wealthy planters, farmers, and lawyers were Federalists. Yet, many craftspeople, merchants, and poor workers also backed the Constitution. Several groups made speeches to advocate their views.

FEDERALIST PAPERS
The Federalist Papers were written anonymously by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, and John Jay in defense of the Constitution. They tried to persuade people that the Constitution would not overwhelm the states. Madison stated that the diversity of the United States meant no single group would take over the government.

The Constitution needed only nine states to pass it, but each state should ratify it as a way of proclaiming national unity. Every state except Rhode Island held state conventions that gave citizens the right to discuss and vote on the Constitution. On December 7, 1787, Delaware became the first state to ratify it. The Constitution went into effect in June 1788 after New Hampshire became the ninth state to ratify it. Several states ratified the Constitution only after a bill protecting individual rights was promised.

BILL OF RIGHTS

Many Antifederalists did not believe that the Constitution would safeguard personal rights. In the first session of Congress, James Madison spurred the legislators to develop a bill of rights. The rights would then become amendments to the Constitution after a two-thirds majority of both houses of Congress and three-fourths of the states approved them. Article V of the Constitution spelled out this way of changing the document to respond to the will of the people.

In December 1791 Congress proposed 12 amendments and turned them over to the states for ratification. By December 1791 the states had ratified the Bill of Rights. Ten of the proposed 12 amendments were written to protect citizens’ rights. These amendments show how the Constitution was amended to meet the needs of a growing nation.

MAIN IDEAS
1. The framers of the Constitution devised the federal system.
2. The legislative branch makes the nation’s laws.
3. The executive branch enforces the nation’s laws.
4. The judicial branch determines whether or not laws are constitutional.

Key Terms and People

impeach vote to bring charges of serious crimes against a president

veto cancel

executive orders commands from the president that have the power of law

pardons orders from the president that grant freedom from punishment

Sandra Day O’Connor the first female Supreme Court Justice, appointed in 1981

Academic Vocabulary

Section Summary

THE FEDERAL SYSTEM
Under the federal system, the U.S. Constitution divides powers between the states and the federal government. The Constitution gives the federal government delegated powers, including coining money. It gives state governments or citizens reserved powers, including forming local governments. Concurrent powers are shared by federal and state governments. These powers include taxing.

Congress has added powers under the elastic clause to handle new issues.

LEGISLATIVE BRANCH
The federal government has three branches, each with distinct responsibilities. Congress, the legislative branch, has two parts. The House of Representatives has 435 members. A state’s population determines the number of representatives for that state. Each state has two senators. They are elected statewide and represent the interests of the entire state.

EXECUTIVE BRANCH
This branch enforces laws made by Congress. The president heads the branch. Americans elect a president every four years. Presidents are limited to two terms. The House of Representatives can impeach the president. The Senate tries the cases. Congress dismisses the president if he or she is found guilty.

The president and Congress work together. A president can veto a law passed by Congress. Congress can undo a veto with a two-thirds majority vote. The president issues executive orders to carry out laws affecting the Constitution and other areas. The president also issues pardons.

JUDICIAL BRANCH
A system of federal courts with the U.S. Supreme Court at the head makes up this branch. Federal courts can undo a state or federal law if the court finds it unconstitutional. Congress can then change the law to make it constitutional.

If someone thinks a conviction was unfair, he or she can take the case to the court of appeals. The losing side in that trial may appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court. If the Court declines to hear a case, the court of appeals decision is final. The Supreme Court has become more diverse with the appointments of Thurgood Marshall and Sandra Day O’Connor.

MAIN IDEAS
- 1. The First Amendment guarantees basic freedoms to individuals.
- 2. Other amendments focus on protecting citizens from certain abuses.
- 3. The rights of the accused are an important part of the Bill of Rights.
- 4. The rights of states and citizens are protected by the Bill of Rights.

Key Terms and People

James Madison  a Federalist who promised that a Bill of Rights would be added to the Constitution majority rule the idea that the greatest number of people in a society can make policies for everyone petition a request made of the government

search warrant an order authorities must get before they search someone’s property

due process a rule that the law must be fairly applied

indict formally accuse

double jeopardy a rule that says a person cannot be tried for the same crime more than once eminent domain the government’s power to take personal property to benefit the public

Section Summary

FIRST AMENDMENT

James Madison began writing a list of amendments to the Constitution in 1789. The states ratified 10 amendments, called the Bill of Rights. Majority rule could take away smaller groups’ rights. The Bill of Rights protects all citizens. First Amendment rights include freedom of religion, freedom of the press, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and the right to petition. The U.S. government cannot support or interfere with the practice of a religion.

The freedoms of speech and the press give Americans the right to express their own ideas and hear those of others. Freedom of assembly means Americans may hold lawful meetings. Citizens can petition for new laws.
PROTECTING CITIZENS
The Second, Third, and Fourth Amendments stem from colonial problems with Britain. The Second Amendment gives state militias the right to bear arms in emergencies. The Third Amendment protects citizens against housing soldiers. The Fourth Amendment protects against certain “searches and seizures.” Authorities must obtain a search warrant to enter a citizen’s property.

RIGHTS OF THE ACCUSED
The Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Amendments guard the rights of the accused. The Fifth Amendment says that the government cannot take a person’s life, liberty, or property without due process. A grand jury decides whether to indictment a person. No one can face double jeopardy. Under eminent domain the government must pay owners a fair amount for their property.

The Sixth Amendment protects an indicted person’s rights. The Seventh Amendment says that juries can decide civil cases, usually about money or property. The Eighth Amendment allows bail, or money defendants pay if they fail to appear in court. This amendment also prevents “cruel and unusual punishments” against a person convicted of a crime.

RIGHTS OF STATES AND CITIZENS
The Ninth Amendment states that all citizens’ rights are not given by the Constitution. According to the Tenth Amendment, any powers not delegated to the federal government or prohibited to the states are held by the states and the people.

Section Summary
GAINING U.S. CITIZENSHIP
Naturalized citizens of the United States may become full citizens. First, they apply for citizenship. Then they go through a process that leads to citizenship being granted. At that point, they have most of the rights and responsibilities of other citizens.

Legal immigrants have many of those rights and responsibilities but cannot vote or hold public office. The U.S. government can deport immigrants who break the law. Legal immigrants over age 18 may seek naturalization after living in the United States for five years. After completing the requirements, the person stands before a naturalization court and takes an oath of allegiance to the United States. They then receive certificates of naturalization. Two differences between native-born and naturalized citizens are that naturalized citizens can lose their citizenships, and they cannot become president or vice president.

DUTIES OF CITIZENSHIP
Citizens have duties as well as rights. Citizens must obey laws and authority. In addition, they must pay taxes for services, including public roads and public schools. Americans pay a tax on their income to the federal, and sometimes state, government. Men 18 years or older must register with selective service in case of a draft. Citizens must serve on juries to give others the right to a trial by jury.

CITIZENS AND GOVERNMENT
Voting in elections is one of a citizen’s most important responsibilities. Before voting, a citizen must find out as much as possible about the issues and candidates. A variety of media sources offer information, but some may be deliberately biased.

Anyone can help in a campaign, even people who are not eligible to vote. Many people help with donations to political action committees (PACs). People can influence government officials at any time. Many U.S. citizens work with special interest groups. Citizens can also work alone in elections or politics in general.

Many dedicated Americans also volunteer in community service groups, such as local firefighters or Neighborhood Watch groups that tell police if they see possible criminal activity in their area. Simple acts such as picking up trash in a park or serving food at a food shelter help a community.

MAIN IDEAS

1. In 1789 George Washington became the first president of the United States.

George Washington an honest leader, a hero of the revolution, and the first U.S. president electoral college a group of delegates, or electors, who represent the people’s vote in choosing the president

Martha Washington George Washington’s wife and the First Lady

precedent an action or a decision that later serves as an example

Judiciary Act of 1789 an act that created three levels of federal courts and defined their powers and relationships to the state courts

Academic Vocabulary

agreement a decision reached by two or more people or groups

Section Summary

THE FIRST PRESIDENT

George Washington was unanimously elected by the electoral college in January 1789. John Adams became his vice president. Martha Washington entertained and accompanied her husband at social events. She was in charge of the presidential household. Other women, such as Abigail Adams, wife of John Adams, believed women needed to play a larger role in the nation than Martha Washington did. They thought that women should take a more important role in society because they educated their children to be good citizens.

ORGANIZING THE GOVERNMENT

The new federal government had to establish a precedent when creating policies and procedures.
that would have a great influence on the future of the nation. Congress formed departments in the executive branch to oversee various areas of national policy. Washington consulted with department heads, or cabinet members, who advised him. Our presidents today also meet with their key advisers.

Congress passed the Judiciary Act of 1789. This act created the federal court system and the courts’ location. The president nominates candidates for federal judgeships. The Senate holds the power to approve or reject the candidates.

AMERICANS’ EXPECTATIONS OF GOVERNMENT

Americans had high expectations of their government. They wanted trade that did not have the limits put in place by the British Parliament. They also expected the government to protect them and keep the economy strong.

In 1790 four million people lived in the United States. Most Americans worked on farms. They hoped for fair taxes and the right to move onto western lands. Americans who lived in towns worked as craftspeople, laborers, or merchants. They wanted help with their businesses. Merchants wanted simpler trade laws. Manufacturers wanted laws to shield them from overseas competitors.

Most cities were small. Only New York and Philadelphia topped 25,000 residents. New York City, the first capital, reflected the new nation’s spirit. In 1792 some 24 Wall Street stockbrokers signed an agreement that eventually created the New York Stock Exchange.

national debt money owed by the United States bonds certificates that represent money speculators people who buy items at low prices in the hope that the value will rise
Thomas Jefferson the first secretary of state who thought that repaying the full value of all bonds would cheat bondholders who had sold their bonds at low prices loose construction the view that the federal government can take reasonable actions that the Constitution does not specifically forbid strict construction the view that the federal government should do only what the Constitution specifically says it can do
The Bank of the United States the national bank

Section Summary

SETTLING THE DEBT
Alexander Hamilton wanted to pay off the national debt. He figured that the United States owed $11.7 million to foreign countries. The nation also owed about $40.4 million to U.S. citizens.

During the Revolutionary War the government sold bonds to raise money. Officials said bonds would be repurchased at a higher price. Some bondholders sold their bonds to speculators. Hamilton and Thomas Jefferson disagreed on what to do. More politicians agreed with Hamilton. The government replaced old bonds with new, more reliable ones.

Hamilton thought that the federal government should repay $21.5 million of the states’ debt. But southern leaders objected. Their states had relatively low debts. Hamilton arranged to have the U.S. capital’s location changed from New York to Philadelphia and finally Washington, D.C. Southern leaders then supported his plan.

HAMILTON VERSUS JEFFERSON

Hamilton and Jefferson disagreed about the role of the central government. Hamilton wanted a strong federal government. Jefferson wanted strong powers for the states. Hamilton did not want people to have much power because he had little faith in the average person. Jefferson believed that the people had the right to rule the country. Hamilton backed manufacturing, business, and higher tariffs. Jefferson backed farming and lower tariffs.

Section Summary

REMAINING NEUTRAL

The French Revolution increased tensions between France and Britain. Many Americans supported the French Revolution, but others opposed it. France and Great Britain finally went to war. George Washington stated U.S. neutrality toward the war in the Neutrality Proclamation. A French representative asked American sailors to command privateers to aid France in fighting England. Washington said that this violated
U.S. neutrality. Jefferson thought the United States should support France and resented interference in his role as secretary of state. He resigned in 1793.

Washington wanted to stop a war between the United States and Britain. The two sides signed Jay's Treaty. Britain would pay damages on seized American ships. Spain and the United States disputed the border of Florida. Pinckney's Treaty settled that issue and reopened New Orleans to American ships.

CONFLICT IN THE NORTHWEST TERRITORY
Americans continued to settle the territory despite protests of American Indians. U.S. forces lost a battle to Miami chief Little Turtle. But General Anthony Wayne commanded U.S. troops in gaining the territory at last. The American Indians were defeated in the Battle of Fallen Timber and their leaders signed the Treaty of Greenville a year later.

THE WHISKEY REBELLION
In March 1791 Congress passed a tax on American-made whiskey. The Whiskey Rebellion broke out. Washington personally led the army against the rebels in western Pennsylvania, but they fled. The revolt ended with no battle.

WASHINGTON SAYS FAREWELL
Washington declined to run for a third term. He had tired of public life and considered the American people the nation’s leaders. In his farewell speech, he warned about the dangers of foreign ties and political conflicts at home. He also cautioned against too much debt. At the conclusion of his speech, he stated that he looked forward to a life of good laws under a free government.

Section Summary

THE ELECTION OF 1796

In the election of 1796, more than one candidate ran for president. Political parties had started during Washington’s presidency. Washington cautioned against party rivalry in his farewell, but rivalry dominated the 1796 election.

Alexander Hamilton was key in founding the Federalist Party. John Adams and Thomas Pinckney were the Federalist candidates. Thomas Jefferson and James Madison helped found the Democratic-Republican Party. That party selected Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr as its candidates.

Business people in cities tended to support Adams. Farmers generally favored Jefferson. Both sides attacked each other. Adams won; Jefferson was second. He and Jefferson then had to serve as president and vice president.
PRESIDENT ADAMS AND THE XYZ AFFAIR
Adams made improving the relationship between the United States and France a high priority. France was unhappy when the United States refused to let its citizens join in the war against Britain. Adams sent U.S. diplomats to repair that problem and make a treaty to guard U.S. shipping. The French foreign minister refused to meet with them.

Three French agents said that the minister would discuss a treaty only if America paid a $250,000 bribe and gave a $12 million loan. The American public became furious about the XYZ affair. Still, Adams did not declare war on France. This angered many other Federalists. At last the United States and France did negotiate a peace treaty.

THE ALIEN AND SEDITION ACTS
The Alien and Sedition Acts, passed by Federalists in Congress, became law in 1798. The Alien Act empowered the president to remove foreign residents he decided were involved in any treasonable or secret plots against the government. The Sedition Act forbid U.S. residents to “write, print, utter, or publish” false or critical words against the government.

The Kentucky and Virginia Resolutions stated that the acts were unconstitutional. Jefferson and James Madison said that the states could disobey unconstitutional federal laws. Congress did not repeal the acts, though they were not renewed. The resolutions presented the view that states could dispute the federal government. Later politicians would say this idea meant that the states could declare laws or actions of the federal government to be illegal.

Critical Thinking: Predicting  Do some research to discover when in U.S. history states would say that they could declare federal law to be illegal. Write a brief essay explaining both sides of the argument.

Thomas Jefferson defeated John Adams and became president in 1800. In campaigning, both sides had made their cases in newspaper editorials and letters. Both sides believed that if the other gained power, the nation would be destroyed.

The campaigning was intense. Federalists said if Jefferson gained power, revolution and chaos would follow. Republicans claimed that Adams would crown himself king. Jefferson and Aaron Burr, his vice presidential running mate, each won 73 votes. After the thirty-sixth ballot in the House of Representatives, Jefferson was elected President.

How did the presidential candidates wage the campaign of 1800?

JEFFERSON’S POLICIES

Jefferson gave his first speech in the new capitol. He said he supported the will of the majority. He emphasized his belief in a limited government and the protection of civil liberties. Jefferson convinced Congress to let the Alien and Sedition Acts expire. He cut military spending to free money to pay the national debt. The Republican-led Congress passed laws to end the unpopular whiskey tax and other domestic taxes.

In 1801 the national government was made up of only several hundred people. Jefferson liked it that way. He thought that safeguarding the nation against foreign threats, delivering the mail, and collecting custom duties were the most important functions of the federal government. Jefferson had fought Alexander Hamilton over the creation of the Bank of the United States, but he did not close it.

MARBURY V. MADISON

Adams filled 16 new federal judgeships with Federalists before leaving office. Republicans in Congress soon repealed the Judiciary Act upon which Adams’s appointments were based. A controversy arose when Adams appointed William Marbury as a justice of the peace. The documents supporting Marbury’s appointment were never delivered.

When Jefferson took office, secretary of state James Madison would not deliver them. Marbury sued and asked the Supreme Court to order Madison to give him the documents. John Marshall wrote the Court’s opinion in Marbury v. Madison. He ruled that the law which Marbury’s case depended upon was unconstitutional. The case established the Court’s power of judicial review.

MAIN IDEAS
1. As American settlers moved West, control of the Mississippi River became more important to the United States.
2. The Louisiana Purchase almost doubled the size of the United States.
3. Expeditions led by Lewis, Clark, and Pike increased Americans’ understanding of the West.

Key Terms and People

Louisiana Purchase the purchase of Louisiana from France for $15 million, which roughly doubled the size of the United States

Meriwether Lewis a former army captain chosen by Jefferson to lead an expedition to explore the West

Section Summary

AMERICAN SETTLERS MOVE WEST

Thousands of Americans moved into the area between the Appalachians and the Mississippi River. The settlers used the Mississippi and Ohio rivers to move their products to eastern markets. Jefferson was concerned that a foreign power might shut down the port of New Orleans, which settlers needed to move their goods East and to Europe. Spain governed New Orleans and Louisiana, which extended from the Mississippi to the Rocky Mountains. Under a secret treaty, Spain gave Louisiana to France, transferring the problem of trying to keep Americans out of Louisiana.

Why did Jefferson worry about the port of New Orleans? ____________

Why would Americans want to move into Louisiana? ____________
LOUISIANA PURCHASE
In 1802, before giving Louisiana to France, Spain shut American shipping out of New Orleans. Jefferson sent U.S. representatives to France to buy New Orleans. Napoleon ruled France. He wanted to rebuild France’s empire in North America. But Napoleon had no base for a conquest of Louisiana. He also needed money to wage war against Great Britain. The United States bought the western territory for $15 million in the Louisiana Purchase.

EXPEDITIONS UNCOVER THE WEST
Western Native Americans and the land they lived on were a mystery. President Jefferson wanted to know about them and their land. He also wondered if there was a river route to the Pacific Ocean.

In 1803 Congress provided money to explore the West. Meriwether Lewis and William Clark were chosen to lead the Lewis and Clark expedition, which began in May 1804.

Lewis and Clark and their crew traveled up the Missouri River. Finally, they saw Native Americans, and Lewis used interpreters to tell their leaders that the United States now owned the land on which they lived. Sacagawea and her husband aided Lewis and Clark. Lewis and Clark did not find a river route to the Pacific, but they learned much about western lands.

In 1806 Zebulon Pike was sent to locate the Red River, which was the Louisiana Territory’s border with New Spain. In present-day Colorado he reached the summit of Pike’s Peak. Spanish cavalry arrested him in Spanish-held lands and imprisoned him. When released he returned to the United States and reported on his trip. He gave many Americans their first information about the Southwest.

VIOLATIONS OF NEUTRALITY
In the late 1700s and early 1800s, American merchant ships sailed the oceans. The profitable overseas trade was dangerous. Pirates seized cargo and held crews for ransom. The United States sent the USS Constitution and other ships to end the attacks.

When Great Britain and France declared war in 1803, each tried to stop the United States from selling goods to the other. The British and French searched many American ships for war goods. Then Britain started searching American ships for sailors who had deserted the British navy. At times U.S. citizens were seized by accident.

Why did Britain and France try to stop the United States from selling goods to the other?
Impressment continued over U.S. protests. Thomas Jefferson, who had been re-elected in 1804, favored an embargo rather than war with Britain. In late 1807 Congress passed the Embargo Act to punish Britain and France. American merchants lost huge amounts of money because of the act. In 1809 Congress replaced the embargo with the Non-Intercourse Act. That law did not work either.

CONFLICT IN THE WEST
In the West, Native Americans, the United States, and Great Britain clashed. As settlers poured into the West, Native Americans lost land that they believed was taken unfairly. British agents from Canada armed Native Americans in the West. Tecumseh, a Shawnee chief, united his forces with the Creek nation. William Henry Harrison, the governor of the Indiana Territory, raised an army to battle Tecumseh. At the day-long Battle of Tippecanoe, Harrison’s forces defeated the Native Americans.

CALL FOR WAR
War Hawks in Congress led in demanding war against Britain. The leaders wanted to end British influence on Native Americans. They resented British restraints on U.S. trade. Others opposed war against Britain. They believed America lacked the military strength to win.

In 1808 Republican James Madison was elected president. He had difficulty carrying on the unpopular trade policy. In 1812 he asked Congress to vote on whether to wage war against Britain. Congress voted to declare war. Madison was again elected. He became commander in chief in the War of 1812.

Section Summary

EARLY BATTLES
In 1812 the United States launched a war against a dominant nation. The British navy had hundreds of ships. The U.S. Navy had fewer than twenty ships, but it boasted expert sailors and big new warships. American morale rose when its ships defeated the British in several battles. Finally, the British blockaded U.S. seaports.

The U.S. planned to attack Canada from Detroit, from Niagara Falls, and from the Hudson River Valley toward Montreal. British soldiers and Native Americans led by Tecumseh took Fort Detroit. State militia doomed the other two attacks against Canada by arguing that they were not required to fight in a foreign country.
In 1813 the United States planned to end Britain’s rule of Lake Erie. Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry and his small fleet won the Battle of Lake Erie. General Harrison then marched his troops into Canada. He defeated a combined force of British and Native Americans, breaking Britain’s power. Tecumseh died in the fighting, harming the alliance of the British and the Native Americans.

In 1814 Andrew Jackson won a battle against the Creek nation that ended in the Treaty of Fort Jackson.

GREAT BRITAIN ON THE OFFENSIVE
The British sent more troops to America after defeating the French in 1814. The British set fire to the White House and other buildings in Washington, D.C. The British also attacked New Orleans.

Andrew Jackson commanded forces made up of regular soldiers. They included two battalions of free African Americans, a group of Choctaw Indian militia, and pirates led by Jean Lafitte. Although Jackson’s forces were outnumbered, America won the Battle of New Orleans, the last key battle of the war. Andrew Jackson became a war hero.

EFFECTS OF THE WAR
Before Federalist delegates from the Hartford Convention reached Washington, the war had ended. Slow communications meant that neither Jackson nor the Federalists heard that the Treaty of Ghent finished the war. Each nation gave back the territory it had conquered. Yet the war had consequences: intense patriotism in America as well as growth of American manufacturing.

Section Summary

SETTLING DISPUTES WITH GREAT BRITAIN
After the War of 1812 ended, both the United States and Great Britain wanted to retain their navies and freedom to fish on the Great Lakes. The Rush-Bagot Agreement resolved that issue. The Convention of 1818 gave America certain fishing rights, and it established the border between the United States and Canada. In this treaty, both countries agreed to occupy the Pacific Northwest together.
THE UNITED STATES GAINS FLORIDA
The United States also debated its border with Spanish Florida. President James Monroe sent General Andrew Jackson and troops to protect the U.S.-Florida border. Seminole Indians often aided runaway slaves and sometimes raided U.S. settlements. Under Jackson’s command U.S. troops invaded Florida to catch Seminole raiders, starting the First Seminole War.

Jackson also captured most of Spain’s key military posts. Jackson took these actions without a direct command from the president. The Spanish were upset, but most Americans backed Jackson. In 1819 Secretary of State John Quincy Adams and Spanish diplomat Luis de Onís negotiated the Adams-Onís Treaty. This treaty settled all border disputes between the United States and Spain.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE
By the early 1820s most Latin American countries had won independence from Spain. Simon Bolivar, called the Liberator, led many of these battles. The United States saw the circumstances as comparable to the American Revolution. United States leaders supported the Latin Americans in their struggles with European powers.

Monroe developed the Monroe Doctrine to guard against European countries interfering with the new Latin American nations. The document spells out the relationship between European nations and the United States in the Western Hemisphere. The doctrine states that the United States will intervene in Latin American affairs when American security is at risk. Few European nations challenged the doctrine.

Section Summary

GROWING NATIONALISM

Americans appreciated a rising sense of nationalism based on favorable negotiations with foreign nations. Henry Clay firmly supported this nationalism. Clay developed the American System to help create a stronger national economy and reduce regional disagreements. He pushed for a protective tariff and a national bank that would back a single currency to encourage interstate trade. The tariff funds could help improve roads and canals.
The mainly dirt roads in the United States made travel hard in the early 1800s. The Cumberland Road stretched from Cumberland, Maryland, to Wheeling, on the Ohio River in present-day West Virginia. By 1850 its extension reached Illinois.

Construction of the Erie Canal started in 1817 and was finished in 1825. Water transportation was often faster, less expensive, and easier than road travel. Using shovels, British, German, and Irish immigrants dug the entire canal by hand. At that time the United States enjoyed an Era of Good Feelings. The canal’s success was an incentive for a canal-building boom across the country.

THE MISSOURI COMPROMISE
Disagreements between the North and South, known as sectionalism, threatened the Union. When Missouri applied to enter the Union, the Union contained 11 free states and 11 slave states. The Senate’s balance would favor the South if Missouri entered as a slave state.

Henry Clay persuaded Congress to agree to the Missouri Compromise. Missouri entered the Union as a slave state, and Maine entered as a free state. This kept an equal balance in the Senate. Slavery was banned in new territories or states north of Missouri’s southern border.

THE ELECTION OF 1824
Senator Andrew Jackson gained the most popular votes but not enough electoral votes to win the election. The House of Representatives chose John Quincy Adams as president. Jackson’s supporters claimed that Adams had made a “corrupt bargain” with Representative Henry Clay to win. Later, Adams named Clay secretary of state. The election controversy cost Adams support among Americans.

- James Fenimore Cooper perhaps the best known of the new American writers
- Hudson River school a group of artists whose paintings reflected national pride and an appreciation of the American landscape

- George Caleb Bingham an artist whose paintings showed both the American landscape and scenes from people’s daily lives

Section Summary

AMERICAN WRITERS

Americans expressed their thoughts and feelings in literature and art. They took spiritual comfort in religion and music. The strengthening national identity was shown in education and architecture.

Washington Irving often wrote about American history. He cautioned Americans to learn from the past and prepare for the future. He often used a humorous style of writing called satire. In “Rip Van Winkle,” one of his most famous short stories, Irving expresses his idea that Americans must use past lessons to deal with the future.

James Fenimore Cooper wrote about characters who lived on the frontier, including Native Americans. By placing some characters in historical events, he popularized historical fiction.
A NEW STYLE OF ART
The works of Irving and Cooper inspired painters. By the 1830s the Hudson River school had appeared. Thomas Cole portrayed the American landscape’s unique traits. Other painters followed his lead. George Caleb Bingham created a painting that shows the rough lives of western traders as well as the landscape.

RELIGION AND MUSIC
Religious revivalism fanned out across America through the early and mid-1800s. Leaders met with large crowds to reawaken religious faith. People sang songs known as spirituals at revival meetings. Spirituals are a kind of folk hymn from both white and African American music traditions. Popular folk music showed the unique views of the nation. “Hunters of Kentucky” honored the Battle of New Orleans. It was used successfully in the presidential campaign of Andrew Jackson in 1828.

ARCHITECTURE AND EDUCATION
In pre-Revolution America, most American architects modeled their designs on the style used in Great Britain. After the Revolution, Thomas Jefferson said that Americans should base their building designs on those of ancient Greece and Rome. Many architects agreed with Jefferson and used Greek and Roman styles.

Americans also found education important. In 1837 Massachusetts set up a state board of education. Other states followed Massachusetts and started their own education systems.

Section Summary

EXPANSION OF DEMOCRACY
In the early 1800s state legislatures expanded democracy, giving more people voting rights. However, women and African Americans still had no voting rights in most states.

By 1828 almost all states had changed the system under which state legislatures nominated electors in the electoral college. Now, the people nominated their own electors. Some parties began to hold nominating conventions. Broader voting rights and conventions allowed more people to actively participate in politics.

JACKSONIAN DEMOCRACY
Andrew Jackson entered the political scene as American democracy grew. Historians called the expansion of democracy in this era Jacksonian Democracy. Jackson’s supporters were mainly farmers, frontier settlers, and southern slaveholders.
They believed he would protect the rights of the common people and the slave states. They referred to themselves as Democrats and established the Democratic Party. Many supporters of President John Quincy Adams called themselves National Republicans.

THE 1828 ELECTION
The presidential candidates were President Adams and Andrew Jackson in a replay of the 1824 election. Jackson selected South Carolina Senator John C. Calhoun as his running mate. The campaign concentrated on personalities. Jackson’s campaigners said he was a war hero who was born poor and earned success through hard work. They said that Adams knew nothing about everyday people because his father had been the second U.S. president. Adams’s backers said Jackson was too coarse to be president.

Jackson and Calhoun won the election. Jackson’s supporters described his victory as a triumph for the common people. A crowd of some 20,000 people held a big party on the White House lawn to celebrate. Jackson began the spoils system, but he replaced fewer than one-fifth of federal officeholders. One of Jackson’s strongest cabinet members was Martin Van Buren. Jackson also relied heavily on a trusted group of advisors that was called the kitchen cabinet.

SECTIONAL DIFFERENCES INCREASE

In Andrew Jackson’s presidency, people’s reaction to almost every policy was based on where they lived and the economy of their region. The North’s economy depended on trade and manufacturing. The North supported tariffs, which helped it compete with foreign manufacturers. Southerners marketed a large portion of their crops to foreign countries. Most southerners opposed tariffs, which led to higher prices in manufactured items that they bought. Westerners wanted cheap land.

Why did northerners disagree with southerners on the issue of tariffs?

________________________________________________________________________
Northerners continued to demand high tariffs to guard their new industries from foreign competition. In 1828 Congress passed a law that southerners called the Tariff of Abominations. (An abomination is a hateful thing.) The tariff intensified sectional differences.

THE STATES’ RIGHTS DEBATE

Early in his career, Vice President John C. Calhoun supported a strong central government. Later on, he argued for states’ rights in the states’ rights doctrine. The debate over states’ rights led to the nullification crisis. Jackson opposed nullification. Calhoun resigned from office. South Carolina’s legislature declared that a new 1832 tariff would not be collected in the state. Daniel Webster backed a unified nation. Congress finally agreed to lower the tariffs gradually. South Carolina’s leaders agreed to obey the law but still backed the nullification idea.

JACKSON ATTACKS THE BANK

President Jackson and many southern states questioned the constitutional legality of the Second Bank of the United States. However, in the case McCulloch v. Maryland, the Bank was found to be constitutional. Jackson moved most of the Bank’s funds to state banks. This action caused inflation.

VAN BUREN’S PRESIDENCY

The Whig Party backed four candidates for president in 1836, and the Democrat, Martin Van Buren, won. When the country experienced the Panic of 1837, Van Buren was blamed. In 1840 the Whigs nominated William Henry Harrison, who won with an electoral landslide.

Academic Vocabulary

Section Summary

THE INDIAN REMOVAL ACT

President Andrew Jackson’s policies toward Native Americans were controversial. They had long lived in settlements from Georgia to Mississippi. Jackson and other political leaders wanted this land for American farmers. Jackson pressured Congress to pass the Indian Removal Act in 1830. The Indian Territory was set aside as a new home for Native Americans.
The Bureau of Indian Affairs was established. Indian peoples began to be removed to Indian Territory. They lost their lands east of the Mississippi. On their trips to Indian Territory, many Native Americans died of cold, disease, and starvation. The Cherokee adopted the contemporary culture of whites to avoid conflicts. Sequoya helped the Cherokee create their own written language.

The Cherokee sued the state when the Georgia militia tried to remove them. In the case Worcester v. Georgia, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in favor of the Cherokee. Georgia ignored the ruling and removed the Cherokee. On the Trail of Tears, the Cherokee suffered from heat, cold, and exposure.

OTHER NATIVE AMERICANS RESIST
Conflicts broke out in Illinois and Florida when some Native Americans decided to resist removal with force. Chief Black Hawk led the Sauk of Illinois in raiding settlements and fighting the U.S. Army. The U.S. Army attacked the Sauk as they retreated, and the uprising ended. By 1850 American Indians had been driven from the Illinois region.

In Florida the Seminole also resisted removal. In 1832 some Seminole leaders were forced to sign a treaty that said they would withdraw from Florida in seven years. Any Seminole of African ancestry would be called a runaway slave.

The Seminoles ignored the treaty. Osceola led his followers in the Second Seminole War. The Seminole won many battles. Some 1,500 U.S. soldiers died. After spending millions of dollars, U.S. officials gave up.

AMERICANS MOVE WEST
In the early 1800s trappers and traders known as mountain men worked to supply the eastern fashion for fur hats and clothing. John Jacob Astor, owner of the American Fur Company, sent mountain men to the Pacific Northwest region that became known as Oregon Country. At this time Oregon Country was inhabited by Native Americans. However, it was claimed by Russia, Spain, Great Britain, and the United States.

In 1811 Astor founded Astoria, which was the first major non-Native American settlement in the region, at the mouth of the Columbia River. After a series of treaties, Oregon Country soon became jointly occupied by Great Britain and the United States. Many Americans began to move to the region, most of them following a challenging and dangerous route that became known as the Oregon Trail. It was common for families to band together and undertake the perilous six-month journey in wagon trains.

Another well-traveled route west, the Santa Fe Trail, was used mainly by traders. They loaded wagon trains with cloth and other manufactured goods that could be traded for horses, mules, and silver in the Mexican settlement of Santa Fe.

MORMONS TRAVEL WEST

One large group of settlers traveled west in search of religious freedom. Joseph Smith founded the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in 1830 in western New York state. Although church membership grew rapidly, the converts, known as Mormons, were dogged by local hostility. To protect his growing community from persecution, Smith led his followers to a series of settlements in Ohio, Missouri, and Illinois.

When Smith was murdered by an anti-Mormon mob in 1844, Brigham Young led the Mormons to a desert valley near the Great Salt Lake in what is now Utah. There the Mormons planned and built Salt Lake City and settled in the area. By December 1860 the Mormon population of Utah stood at about 40,000.

Section Summary
AMERICAN SETTLERS MOVE TO TEXAS
In the early 1800s, the region we now know as the American Southwest was part of Mexico, which in turn was part of the vast Spanish empire in the Americas. Mexico struggled against Spanish rule. A revolt led by Father Miguel Hidalgo y Costilla in 1810 failed, but the rebellion he started grew. In 1821 Mexico became independent.

In order to establish control of Texas, the new Mexican republic hired agents known as empresarios to bring settlers there. One of these, Stephen F. Austin, selected a site on the lower Colorado River and settled 300 families, mostly from the southern states. These settlers often ignored Mexican laws, including Mexico’s law forbidding slavery.

Tension grew between Mexico’s central government and the American settlers. Colonists were angry when Antonio López de Santa Anna came to power in 1830 and suspended Mexico’s constitution. Austin was imprisoned for a year and a half. When he returned to Texas, he began urging Texans to rebel against Mexico.

TEXANS REVOLT AGAINST MEXICO

Hostilities began with a battle at Gonzalez in 1835. Santa Anna inflicted two brutal defeats on the Texans at the Alamo and Goliad. Within a month, however, Texas forces under Sam Houston had won a decisive victory over Santa Anna at the Battle of San Jacinto. Santa Anna signed a treaty giving Texas its independence.

Most people in the new Republic of Texas hoped that Texas would join the United States. However, U.S. President Andrew Jackson was concerned about two factors. He was worried that admitting Texas as a slave state would upset the fragile balance between free and slave states in the Union. Also, Jackson feared that annexing Texas might lead to a war with Mexico.

As the annexation of Texas was delayed, more American settlers came from nearby southern states, often bringing slaves with them to work the land and to grow cotton. Tensions between Mexico and Texas remained high. After a few unsettled years, Texas President Sam Houston signed a peace treaty with Mexico in 1844.

MANIFEST DESTINY

The idea of manifest destiny loomed large in the election of 1844. The new president, James K. Polk, promised to annex both Texas and Oregon.

In 1846 Britain and the United States signed a treaty that gave the United States all Oregon land south of the 49th parallel. This treaty drew the present-day border between the United States and Canada. In 1845 the congresses of both the Republic of Texas and the United States approved annexation of Texas.

After winning independence from Spain in 1821, Mexico began changing old policies set by Spain.
Mission lands were broken up into vast ranches. Vaqueros managed the herds of cattle and sheep. Settlers, known as Californios, felt little connection to their faraway government in Mexico. American settlers also began coming to California and calling for independence from Mexico.

MEXICAN-AMERICAN WAR

Since the Texas Revolution the border between Mexico and Texas had been in dispute. Mexico claimed the border lay along the Nueces River while the United States claimed the Rio Grande as the border. In 1845 President Polk sent troops to the Rio Grande. When Mexican soldiers attacked them, Congress declared war on Mexico. Although many Americans thought the war was unjustified, dangerous, and avoidable, U.S. troops pushed into Mexico, going from victory to victory until they finally captured Mexico City. A successful revolt against the Californios in Sonoma, known as the Bear Flag Revolt, proclaimed California to be an independent nation.

AMERICAN SETTLEMENT IN THE MEXICAN CESSION

The Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo, which ended the Mexican War in 1848, increased the land area of the United States by almost 25 percent. A few years later, in 1853, the Gadsden Purchase fixed the continental boundaries of the United States.

As American settlers flooded the Southwest, cultural encounters often led to conflict and violence. New settlers usually ignored Mexican legal ideas, such as community property or community water rights. However, traditional knowledge and customs gradually shaped local economies, and new and mutually beneficial trade patterns began to emerge.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

Critical Thinking: Identify Cause and Effect  Write a law regulating water rights.

DISCOVERY OF GOLD BRINGS SETTLERS

Before 1840 few Americans settled in California, although there was considerable trade between merchants from Mexico and the United States. However, after Mexico allowed John Sutter to establish a colony in 1839, American settlers began arriving in greater numbers. In a tragic incident, heavy snows in the Sierra Nevada Mountains trapped a group of travelers known as the Donner party. Half of the travelers either froze or starved to death.

When gold was discovered at Sutter’s Mill in 1848, the news spread across the country. During 1849 about 80,000 forty-niners came to California hoping to strike it rich. Most of them arrived in the small port town of San Francisco. Within a year, the population of San Francisco grew from around 800 to more than 25,000.

Mining methods varied by the time of year and the location of the claim. Placer miners would prospect by using pans or other devices to wash gold nuggets out of the loose rock and gravel. Richer miners established companies to dig shafts and tunnels. Many individual success stories... inspired prospectors. However, the good luck that made some miners wealthy never came to thousands of gold seekers. Most of them found little except misery and debt.

Mining camps sprang up wherever enough people gathered to look for gold. Among the gold seekers were thousands of immigrants from Mexico, China, Europe, and South America. Many found that they could earn a living by supplying miners with basic services like cooking, washing clothes, operating boardinghouses, or even providing legal services. Biddy Mason and her family, slaves brought to California by a forty-niner from Georgia, gained their freedom and managed to buy some land near the village of Los Angeles. Soon Mason became one of the wealthiest landowners in California.

IMPACT ON CALIFORNIA
The forty-niners brought a population explosion and an economic boom to California. It became the 31st state of the Union in 1850. As the gold rush faded, many Californians took to farming and ranching. However, California remained isolated from the rest of the country until the transcontinental railroad was completed in 1869.

Section Summary

THE INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION

In the early 1700s, most people in the United States and Europe made a living by farming. Female family members often used hand tools to make cloth for families. The sale of extra cloth earned money. Skilled workers such as blacksmiths set up shops to earn money by manufacturing goods by hand.

The Industrial Revolution would completely change that way of life. By the mid-1700s, cities and populations had grown. Demand increased for efficient and faster ways to make items.
Textiles provided the first breakthrough. Richard Arkwright invented a machine that lowered the cost of cotton cloth and raised production speed. The machine was large and needed a power source. Most textile mills were built near streams to use running water for power.

NEW MACHINES AND PROCESSES
Samuel Slater knew how to build machines that were used in Britain to make cloth more efficiently. He emigrated to the United States, and with Moses Brown opened a mill in Pawtucket, Rhode Island. The mill made cotton thread by machine. It was a success. Most mills were in the northeast, the region with many rivers and streams for power.

A MANUFACTURING BREAKTHROUGH
In the 1790s U.S. gun makers could not produce muskets quickly enough to satisfy the government’s demand. Better technology was needed. Eli Whitney had the idea of manufacturing using interchangeable parts. Whitney assembled muskets for President Adams. His idea worked. Mass production was soon used in factories making interchangeable parts.

MANUFACTURING’S SLOW START
U.S. manufacturing spread slowly. People who could buy good farmland would not work for low factory wages. British goods were cheaper than American goods. However, during the War of 1812 many Americans learned that they had relied on foreign goods too much. In 1815 the war ended and free trade returned. Businesspeople wanted to lead the nation into a time of industrial growth.

FACTORY FAMILIES
Samuel Slater had difficulty hiring enough people to work in his mills. Young male apprentices often left because their work was boring. Slater began hiring entire families to move to Pawtucket.

Slater constructed housing for the workers. He paid workers in credit at the company store rather than paying them cash. This way Slater could reinvest money in his business. Children usually earned in one week what an adult was paid for one day’s work. Slater’s method was known as the Rhode Island system. Many northeastern mill owners imitated Slater’s system.

How much did child workers earn in factories?
THE LOWELL SYSTEM

Francis Cabot Lowell developed a different approach called the Lowell system. It transformed the Northeast’s textile industry. With the aid of a company, Lowell built mills in Waltham and Lowell, both in Massachusetts. The factories were clean, and the workers’ boardinghouses were neat.

Many young women, called Lowell girls, journeyed from across New England to earn money instead of earning nothing on the family farm. The Lowell girls were encouraged to take classes and join clubs. However, they worked 12- to 14-hour days, and cotton dust caused health problems for them.

WORKERS ORGANIZE

Factory workers’ wages went down as people competed for jobs. Immigrants also competed for jobs. The Panic of 1837 led to unemployment for many. Skilled workers started trade unions for protection. Sometimes union members held strikes. But most strikes were not very successful.

LABOR REFORM EFFORTS

Sarah G. Bagley battled for the workers. She was the first highly ranked woman in America’s labor movement. In 1840 President Martin Van Buren had given a 10-hour workday to many federal employees. Bagley wanted the 10-hour workday for all workers.

The Unions won some concrete legal victories. Some states passed 10-hour workday laws. But companies often found ways to get around them. Other states did not pass the 10-hour workday laws. Union supporters kept fighting for improved working conditions during the 1800s.

2. The steamboat was one of the first developments of the Transportation Revolution.
3. Railroads were a vital part of the Transportation Revolution.
4. The Transportation Revolution brought many changes to American life and industry.

Key Terms and People

Transportation Revolution a period of rapid growth in the speed and convenience of travel
Robert Fulton an American who had the first full-time commercial steamboat in the United States
Clermont a steamboat that could travel up the Hudson River with no trouble
Gibbons v. Ogden the first U.S. Supreme Court ruling on commerce between states
Peter Cooper an American who built the Tom Thumb, a small steam train with great power and speed

Section Summary

NEW WAYS TO TRAVEL
Along with the Industrial Revolution, the Transportation Revolution changed life in the 1800s by speeding travel and decreasing cost of shipping goods. People and information began traveling at much higher speeds. New towns and businesses sprang up with improved communication, travel, and trade. The steamboat and the railroad, new kinds of transportation, quickened the pace of American life.

THE STEAMBOAT
In the late 1700s American and European inventors advanced steam-powered boats. Robert Fulton tested the Clermont in the United States. The successful test helped launch the steamboat era.
Steamboats cut months off the time needed to travel from one place to another. They made trips up rivers cheaper and easier. Shipping goods from East to West, West to East, or overseas also was easier.

Sometimes the changes in transportation led to legal conflicts. In a landmark case, Gibbons v. Ogden, the court ruled that federal shipping laws overruled state shipping laws.

AMERICAN RAILROADS

In 1830 Peter Cooper built the Tom Thumb, a small but fast train. Excitement over rail travel grew in the mid-1800s. By 1860 about 30,000 miles of railroad tracks joined nearly every major eastern U.S. city. Trains took goods to faraway markets. Train travel averaged about 20 miles per hour and could be dangerous because of fires and derailment. But the dangers did not discourage travelers who wanted to go places faster.

TRANSPORTATION REVOLUTION BRINGS CHANGES

Trains brought new residents and raw materials for industry to cities, spurring growth. Coal replaced wood as a source of fuel because of its greater efficiency. That led to growth in the mining industry. Steel was used for railroad tracks, so the demand for steel increased. Railroad transportation also helped logging expand because wood was needed to build new houses in the growing cities. Chicago, on Lake Michigan, became a hub for national transportation.

4. New inventions changed lives in American homes.

Key Terms and People

Telegraph a device that could send information over wires across great distances
Morse code a system in which dots and dashes are used to stand for each letter of the alphabet
John Deere a blacksmith who first used the steel plow design
Cyrus McCormick the developer of a new harvesting machine called a mechanical reaper
Isaac Singer an inventor who made improvements in the design of the sewing machine

Section Summary

Messages by Wire

Samuel F. B. Morse invented the telegraph in 1832. Morse used the work of two other scientists in making this practical machine. Telegraphs carry pulses, or surges, of electric current over wires. The operator touches a bar, called a telegraph key, that sets the length of each pulse. At the wire's other end, the pulses change into clicks. A short click is a dot; a long click is a dash.

Morse's assistant, Alfred Lewis Vail, developed the Morse code. Some people did not think Morse could actually read messages sent across long distances. But during the 1844 Democratic Convention in Baltimore, Maryland, a telegraph wired news of a nomination to politicians who were in Washington. Soon telegraphs were relaying messages for... businesses, the government, newspapers, and private citizens. Telegraph lines were strung on poles next to railroad tracks across the country.

NEW FACTORIES
Most factories, operating on water power at first, had to be built near water. With the use of steam engines, factories could be built almost anywhere. Still, most were in the Northeast. By 1860 New England had as many factories as all of the South had. Many new factories were near cities and transportation centers, giving them better access to workers. In addition, by the 1840s new machinery could produce interchangeable parts.

BETTER FARM EQUIPMENT
John Deere was selling 1,000 steel plows a year by 1846. Cyrus McCormick mass-produced his reapers in a large Chicago factory. His company advertised, provided service, and let customers buy on credit. The plow and the reaper allowed Midwestern farmers to harvest huge wheat fields.

CHANGING LIFE AT HOME
The sewing machine was among the American inventions that made home life easier. Isaac Singer modified the sewing machine and worked hard to sell his product. Prices of many household items had decreased, giving many more people the ability to afford them.

Section Summary

THE SOUTH’S AGRICULTURAL ECONOMY

After the American Revolution, the use of slaves began to decline. Because crop prices fell, farmers planted less, so they needed less slave labor.

Cotton was not a new crop to the southern states. However, few farmers planted much, for the short-staple cotton that grew well there was very hard to separate from its seeds. Northerner Eli Whitney changed that when he invented the cotton gin.

This hand-cranked cylinder easily pulled cotton and seeds apart. With the cotton gin, cotton crops became profitable. A cotton gin could clean as much cotton as planters could plant and their slaves could pick. A planter was a large-scale farmer who owned more than 20 slaves.

Why was it difficult to harvest cotton before the invention of the cotton gin?

__________________________

THE COTTON BOOM
For southern farmers cotton had many advantages over other crops. Unlike food products cotton could be stored for long periods of time. Plus its lightness made it fairly inexpensive to transport. As a result, the cotton-supported slave trade grew, even as Congress worked to limit slavery in the nation.

Most of the country’s cotton was produced in the cotton belt, which stretched from South Carolina to Texas. Without transportation systems such as roads and canals, southern farmers relied on rivers to move their cotton. When the cotton reached a port, the farmers sold their cotton to merchants who then contacted factors to arrange transportation for the cotton aboard trading ships.

OTHER CROPS AND INDUSTRIES
Scientific agriculture, or the use of scientific methods to improve farming, encouraged southern farmers to rotate the kinds of crops they planted. The primary food crop of the South was corn, but farmers also grew rice, sugarcane, wheat, tobacco, hemp, and flax. Some southerners encouraged the growth of industry. As a result, some industries, such as the Tredegar Iron Works, also flourished. Still, most of the South focused on farming.

SOUTHERN SOCIETY AND CULTURE

Only about one-third of all southerners owned slaves. Far fewer were actually wealthy planters. However, those few planters were among the most influential southern citizens, and many were political leaders.

On the vast plantations, the planter ran the farm business. A wealthy planter would have overseers to help him. The planter’s wife ran the household, which included many house slaves. She also was in charge of important social events such as dances and dinners.

Most southern farmers were yeomen. Yeomen owned small farms averaging about 100 acres, and often they worked side by side with the few slaves they might own.

Many white southerners were poor. They owned no slaves at all. Often they lived on land that could not grow crops. These farmers were at the bottom of the economic ladder.

RELIGION AND SOCIETY

Religion was central to southern life. One reason was its social impact. Often farm families only saw their neighbors at church functions. Some southerners also believed that Christianity justified slavery—a belief not shared by Christians in the North.
SOUTHERN CITIES
The economy of the South also depended on the businesses conducted in its busy cities. As in northern cities, southern cities provided many services to residents, including water systems and street maintenance. Southern cities used slave labor, too. Businesses either owned slaves or hired them out from nearby planters.

FREE AFRICAN AMERICANS
Not all African Americans were slaves. Some were free. Some had been born free. Others had bought their freedom from their slaveowners or had run away. About half of these free African Americans lived in the South.

The presence of free African Americans concerned some white southerners. They worried that those who were free would incite those who were enslaved to rise up against their owners. As a result, southern cities and states passed laws aimed at limiting the rights of these free African Americans.

Free African Americans posed a threat to the institution of slavery. Many whites believed the African American could not survive outside of slavery. They used this as justification for slavery. The free African Americans could prove this theory wrong.

SLAVES AND WORK
Most planters used the gang labor system to get their fields farmed. In this system enslaved men, women, and children over 10 years of age all did the same fieldwork from dawn until dark.

Slaves with special skills often were rented out by their owners. Sometimes these slaves were allowed to keep part of what they earned. As a consequence, some skilled slaves were able to save enough money to buy their own freedom.

LIFE UNDER SLAVERY
To most southern slaveholders, slaves were property, not people. As property, slaves could be bought and sold. Usually, this business occurred at a slave auction. At these auctions family members could be sold away from each other forever.

How could skilled slaves buy their freedom?

What could happen to family members at a slave auction?
Many slaveholders used cruel punishments to make sure their slaves stayed obedient. In addition, many states passed strict slave codes. These laws limited what slaves could do. For example, in some states it was illegal to teach slaves to read and write.

SLAVE CULTURE

For enslaved African Americans, the family was the most important aspect of their lives. Parents made sure their children knew the African part of their history, including African customs and traditions. Since they could not read and write, they passed this information verbally. Some of their stories were folktales—stories with morals—to teach children how to survive slavery.

Religion was also an important part of the culture of enslaved African Americans. Christian slaves believed that, in God’s eyes, they were equal to anyone else. They held onto the hope that someday they would be freed. Often, these beliefs were expressed in the spirituals they sang.

CHALLENGING SLAVERY

Enslaved African Americans found a variety of ways to protest their treatment. Some even ran away. But getting all the way North to freedom was filled with dangers and hardships. Most runaways were caught and forced to return.

Sometimes, slaves protested with violence. They risked certain punishment. This was true of Virginia slave Nat Turner. During Nat Turner’s Rebellion in 1831, slaves killed about 60 white people. In the end, though, more than 100 slaves were killed, and Turner was executed. As a result, many states strengthened their slave codes.

MILLIONS OF IMMIGRANTS ARRIVE
Between 1840 and 1860, more than four million immigrants came to the United States. Many came from Ireland, fleeing starvation that came with a terrible potato famine there. The famine also meant that many Irish immigrants arrived poor. These immigrants often got jobs working long hours for little pay.

Unlike the Irish, immigrants from Germany often arrived with some money. Many came to America after a revolution in their homeland. Others came for the opportunities America offered. Many bought farmland in America's Midwest. Others settled and worked in cities.

THE NATIVIST RESPONSE
To many native-born Americans, the new immigrants posed an implicit threat. Americans worried that immigrants would take away their jobs. Immigrants would do the same work but for less... money. The Americans also mistrusted immigrants who were Catholic. In Europe, Protestants and Catholics had a history of conflicts.

Americans who opposed immigration for these reasons were known as nativists. Together, the nativists formed a political group called the Know-Noth-Nothing Party, which tried to limit immigration.

THE GROWTH OF CITIES
In the mid-1800s, the Industrial Revolution encouraged rapid growth in America’s cities. The jobs the Industrial Revolution created also helped build a middle class—a social and economic level between the wealthy and the poor. These new urban dwellers enjoyed the culture in America’s cities. Libraries, clubs, and theaters grew as the cities grew.

URBAN PROBLEMS
The people who moved to the city to work could afford only tenement rents. Tenements were poorly designed housing structures that were dirty, overcrowded, and unsafe. Cities had not yet learned how to deal with the filth and garbage generated by so many people, and killer epidemics resulted. Crime and fires also plagued the fast-growing cities of the United States.

TRANSCENDENTALISM AND UTOPIAN COMMUNITIES

Transcendentalism was a belief system in which followers thought they could rise above the material things in life. Transcendentalists believed that people should depend on themselves rather than outside authority. Ralph Waldo Emerson, Margaret Fuller, and Henry David Thoreau were among the great American thinkers who were also transcendentalists.

Emerson expressed his ideas in the essay “Self-Reliance.” Fuller wrote Women in the Nineteenth Century, a book about women’s basic rights. In his book Life in the Woods, Thoreau summarized many of his transcendentalist beliefs.

Some transcendentalists created communities apart from society. In these utopian communities, people hoped to form a perfect society. Some, such as the Shaker communities, were based on religious beliefs. Other groups pursued utopian lifestyles for abstract and transcendental reasons.

THE AMERICAN ROMANTICS

In the early and mid-1800s, many artists were inspired by simple life and nature's beauty. Some joined the Romantic movement that began in Europe with British poets such as Blake, Byron, Keats, and Shelley. For the Romantics, each person brought a unique point of view to the world. These writers used their emotions to guide their words.

At this time American Romantic writers began to develop an American style. Female writers such as Ann Sophia Stephens wrote popular historical fiction. Another historical novel, The Scarlet Letter by Nathaniel Hawthorne, described Puritan life in America. Herman Melville wrote Moby Dick, considered to be one of America's finest novels. Edgar Allan Poe also gained fame for his short stories and poetry.

Emily Dickinson, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, and John Greenleaf Whittier are just three poets of this time whose works have long outlived them. The same is true of Walt Whitman, who used his poem Leaves of Grass to praise American individualism and democracy.

The Spirit of Revival

During the 1790s, a period of Christian renewal began. It was known as the Second Great Awakening. By the 1830s, it had swept through New England, the Appalachians, and the South.

Charles Grandison Finney was one of the leaders of the Second Great Awakening. Some did not agree with Finney’s message. However, the Constitution’s First Amendment guaranteed Finney’s right to speak and be heard. Through the efforts of Finney and other ministers, many Americans joined churches across the country.
SOCIAL REFORMS

In the spirit of the Second Great Awakening, people tried to reform many of society’s ills. In the temperance movement, people aimed at limiting alcohol consumption. Lyman Beecher and other ministers spoke about the evils of alcohol.

Another reformer, Dorothea Dix, reported on the terrible conditions she found when she visited some Massachusetts prisons. Imprisoned along with adult criminals were the mentally ill and children. Because of efforts by Dix and others, governments built hospitals for the mentally ill and reform schools for young lawbreakers. They also began to try to reform—not just punish—prisoners.

Education in the early 1800s improved with the common-school movement. This movement, led by Horace Mann, worked to have all students, regardless of background, taught in the same place. Women’s education also improved at this time. Several women’s schools, including Catherine Beecher’s all-female academy in Connecticut, opened. Teaching people with disabilities improved, too. For example, Thomas Gallaudet bettered the education of the hearing impaired.

AFRICAN AMERICAN COMMUNITIES AND SCHOOLS

In this period, life improved for the nation’s free black population. The Free Africans Religious Society, founded by Richard Allen, pressed for equality and education. Leaders such as Alexander Crummel helped build African American schools in New York, Philadelphia, and other cities. In 1835 Oberlin College became the first college to admit African Americans. Soon after, in the 1840s, several African American colleges were founded.

Section Summary

Americans Oppose Slavery

By the 1830s, many Americans formed a movement to end slavery. They supported abolition. These abolitionists worked for emancipation, or freedom from slavery, for all who lived in the United States.

Some abolitionists thought that ex-slaves should get the same rights enjoyed by other Americans. Others, however, hoped to send the freed blacks back to Africa to start new colonies there. In fact, the American Colonization Society successfully founded the African colony of Liberia.

Many abolitionists spread the message of abolition using the power of the pen. William Lloyd...
Garrison, for example, ran the Liberator newspaper. He also helped found the American Anti-Slavery Society. This group believed in emancipation and racial equality. Angelina and Sarah Grimké were two sisters from a southern slave-holding family. They wrote pamphlets and a book to try to convince other white people to join the fight against slavery.

AFRICAN AMERICANS FIGHT AGAINST SLAVERY

When Frederick Douglass was a slave, he secretly learned to read and write. After he escaped slavery, he used those skills to support the abolition movement by publishing a newspaper and writing books about his life. Douglass also was a powerful speaker who vividly described slavery’s horrors. Many other ex-slaves also were active abolitionists. One example was Sojourner Truth, who became famous for her anti-slavery speeches.

THE UNDERGROUND RAILROAD

The Underground Railroad was the name given a loosely knit group of white and black abolitionists who helped escaped slaves get North to freedom. One of the most famous “conductors” on this Railroad was an ex-slave named Harriet Tubman. She made 19 trips to the north, freeing more than 300 slaves.

OPPOSITION TO ABOLITION

Many white southerners felt slavery was vital to their economy. They also felt that outsiders should not tell them what to do. Some justified enslaving people by claiming that African Americans needed the structure of slavery to survive.

Critical Thinking: Make Inferences Why do you think Frederick Douglass called his newspaper the North Star?

MAIN IDEAS

1. Influenced by the abolition movement, many women struggled to gain equal rights for themselves.
2. Calls for women’s rights met opposition from men and women.
3. The Seneca Falls Convention launched the first organized women’s rights movement in the United States.

Key Terms and People

Elizabeth Cady Stanton, supporter of women’s rights who helped organize the Seneca Falls Convention
Lucretia Mott, women’s rights supporter who helped organize the Seneca Falls Convention
Seneca Falls Convention, the first organized public meeting about women’s rights held in the United States
Declaration of Sentiments, the document officially requesting equal rights for women
Lucy Stone, spokesperson for the Anti-Slavery Society and the women’s rights movement
Susan B. Anthony, women’s rights supporter who argued for equal pay for equal work, the right of women to enter traditionally male professions, and property rights

Section Summary

THE INFLUENCE OF ABOLITION

In the mid-1800s, some female abolitionists also began to focus on the women’s rights in America, despite their many critics. For example, the Grimké sisters were criticized for speaking in public. Their critics felt they should stay at home. Sarah Grimké responded by writing a pamphlet in support of women’s rights. She also argued for equal educational opportunities, as well as for laws that treated women in an equal manner.

Abolitionist Sojourner Truth also became a women’s rights supporter. The ex-slave never learned to read or write, but she became a great and influential speaker.
OPPONENTS OF WOMEN’S RIGHTS
The women’s movement had many critics—both men and women. Some felt a woman should stay home. Others felt women were not as physically or mentally strong as men. Therefore, they needed the protection of first their fathers, then their husbands. This was why upon marriage, husbands took control of their wives’ property.

THE SENECA FALLS CONVENTION
With the support of leaders like Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott, the Seneca Falls Convention opened July 19, 1848, in Seneca Falls, New York. It was the first time American women organized to promote women’s rights. It resulted in the Declaration of Sentiments. This document officially requested equality for women. It brought 18 charges against men, much as the Declaration of Independence had brought 18 charges against King George III.

THE CONTINUING STRUGGLE
After the convention, more women rose to lead the fight for rights. Lucy Stone, for example, was another abolitionist who spoke out for women’s rights. So did Susan B. Anthony. Anthony argued that women should be paid the same as men for the same job, and that women could do the jobs reserved for men. Anthony also fought for property rights for women. Many states changed their property laws because of her efforts. But some rights, such as the right to vote, were not won until much later.

2. The Compromise of 1850 tried to solve the disputes over slavery.
3. The Fugitive Slave Act caused more controversy.
4. Abolitionists used antislavery literature to promote opposition.

Wilmot Proviso suggested bill that would outlaw slavery in new U.S. territory

sectionalism situation in which people favor the interests of one region over those of the entire country

Free-Soil Party third political party that formed to support abolition

Compromise of 1850 law that maintained America’s slave-state/free-state balance

Fugitive Slave Act law that made it a crime to aid runaway slaves

Anthony Burns Virginia slave-fugitive whose attempted rescue from a Boston jail ended in violence

Uncle Tom’s Cabin antislavery novel written by Harriet Beecher Stowe

Harriet Beecher Stowe author of the antislavery novel, Uncle Tom’s Cabin

Section Summary

THE EXPANSION OF SLAVERY

The nation’s debate over slavery continued as the country got bigger. Many northerners for example, supported the Wilmot Proviso, which would outlaw slavery in new lands. Many southerners, on the other hand, did not support the bill. Arguments about the proviso showed how sectionalism was dividing the country.

Some favored the idea of popular sovereignty. They thought each region’s voters should decide the question of slavery for that region. The debate was so intense that a third political party, the Free-Soil Party, formed to support abolition.
THE COMPROMISE OF 1850
The Compromise of 1850 was presented by Kentucky’s Henry Clay. Its purpose was to maintain the delicate balance between slave and free states. It became law because of support by representatives like Senator Daniel Webster.

THE FUGITIVE SLAVE ACT
Part of the Compromise of 1850 required passage of the Fugitive Slave Act. This act made it a crime to help runaway slaves. Abolitionists especially reacted in anger to the Compromise. Sometimes that anger turned to violence. This was true when abolitionists tried to rescue Virginia fugitive Anthony Burns from a Boston jail.

ANTISLAVERY LITERATURE
Many abolitionists expressed their antislavery feelings in speeches. Others used the written word to influence people on the issue of slavery. One effective author was Harriet Beecher Stowe. In 1852 Stowe’s antislavery novel, Uncle Tom’s Cabin, was published. The book showed some of the consequences of slavery. It sold more than 2 million copies and influenced many to support the end of slavery.

THE ELECTION OF 1852
In the presidential election of 1852, the Democrats nominated Franklin Pierce. He was not a well-known politician, however his promise to honor the Compromise of 1850 assured him many southern votes. Pierce ran against Whig candidate Winfield Scott.

Pierce’s win over Scott was resounding. When the votes were counted, it was discovered that out of the 31 states, 27 voted for Pierce.
THE KANSAS-NEBRASKA ACT
The slavery issue continued to plague the United States. In 1854, Representative Stephen Douglas introduced a bill that addressed slavery in the Louisiana Territory. When it was signed into law on May 30, it became known as the Kansas-Nebraska Act. It got its name from the two territories into which it divided the rest of Louisiana—Kansas and Nebraska. In each territory, popular sovereignty would determine the answer to the slavery question.

To make sure Kansas voted in favor of slavery, pro-slavery voters left their homes in Missouri to cross the border and vote in Kansas. They won and quickly set up a pro-slavery government. However those who did not believe in slavery set up another, separate government in Topeka.

“BLEEDING KANSAS”
In May 1856, pro-slavery jurors charged antislavery leaders with treason. Pro-slavery forces rode to Lawrence to arrest those charged. When they found the suspects had fled, they burned and looted the town.

The Sack of Lawrence outraged many abolitionists, including New England abolitionist John Brown. Together with a small group that included four of his sons, Brown was responsible for the Pottawatomie Massacre, in which five pro-slavery men were killed. Quickly, Kansas fell into civil war.

Fighting even took place on the Senate floor. South Carolina Representative Preston Brooks used his cane to beat Massachusetts Senator Charles Sumner into unconsciousness because of Sumner’s criticisms of pro-slavery leaders.

NEW DIVISIONS

As the 1850s progressed Whigs, Democrats, Free-Soilers, and abolitionists united to create the Republican Party to fight slavery. Others left their parties to form the Know-Nothing Party. For the 1856 presidential election, the old Democratic Party nominated James Buchanan. Buchanan had been out of the country during the Kansas bloodshed, but he defeated Know-Nothing Millard Fillmore and Republican John C. Frémont.
THE DRED SCOTT DECISION

Dred Scott was a slave. His slaveowner was a doctor who traveled from Missouri, a slave state, to free areas and back again to Missouri. Scott sued for his freedom, since he had lived in free states.

The Supreme Court’s decision in this complex case was against Scott. Chief Justice Roger B. Taney wrote that African Americans were not citizens, and only citizens could sue in federal court. Taney also wrote in the Dred Scott decision that slaves were considered property, and Scott living in free territory did not make him free. Taney said that Congress could not stop people from taking slaves into federal territory.

Many antislavery voices rose against the decision. This included the voice of an Illinois lawyer named Abraham Lincoln.

THE LINCOLN-DOUGLAS DEBATES

In 1858 Abraham Lincoln ran for a U.S. Senate seat as the Republican candidate. His opponent was Democrat Stephen Douglas, who was up for reelection. During the campaign, the two men met several times in what became known as the Lincoln-Douglas debates. In the debates, Lincoln was careful not to talk about slavery in the existing slave states. Instead, he claimed the Democrats were trying to spread slavery across the nation.

During the second debate, Lincoln questioned Douglas about popular sovereignty. He wondered whether that belief went against the Dred Scott decision. In other words, how could the people ban what the Supreme Court allowed? Douglas restated his belief in popular sovereignty. His response was remembered as the Freeport Doctrine.

1. John Brown’s raid on Harpers Ferry intensified the disagreement between free states and slave states.
2. The outcome of the election of 1860 divided the United States.

Key Terms and People

John C. Breckinridge  pro-slavery candidate nominated by southern Democrats for the 1860 presidential election
Constitutional Union Party  new political party that concentrated on constitutional principles

Confederate States of America  the country formed by seceding southern states
Jefferson Davis  the Confederacy’s first president
John J. Crittenden  Tennessee senator who proposed a compromise to try to stop southern secession

Section Summary

THE RAID ON HARPER'S FERRY

John Brown was an abolitionist. He decided to use violence to try to stop slavery. He planned to lead an attack on the arsenal at Harpers Ferry, Virginia.

John Brown’s raid began on October 16, 1859. Although he succeeded in taking the arsenal, federal troops overwhelmed him and his small band. They killed some of Brown’s followers and captured others, including Brown himself.
JUDGING JOHN BROWN

Brown was charged and found guilty. On December 2, 1859, he was hanged for his crimes.

Many northerners agreed with Brown’s anti-slavery beliefs, but they did not agree with his violent methods. Southerners worried that Brown’s raid was the start of more attacks on the South.

THE ELECTION OF 1860

The country was torn as the 1860 presidential election approached. The Democrats proposed two candidates—the North’s Stephen Douglas and the South’s John C. Breckinridge. In addition, the new Constitutional Union Party nominated John Bell. Abraham Lincoln ran on the Republican ticket.

Lincoln won the election, but he did not carry a southern state in his win. This angered southerners, who worried that they had lost their political power.

THE SOUTH SECEDES

Southern states responded to Lincoln’s election with secession. These states joined together into a new country—the Confederate States of America. They elected Mississippian Jefferson Davis as their first president. In this country, slavery was legal.

Lincoln argued that southern states could not secede. It seemed that even compromises, like one proposed by Kentucky Senator John J. Crittenden, would not mend this tear in the national fabric.

President-elect Lincoln declared there could be no compromise where slavery was concerned. He also announced that the federal property in southern lands remained part of the United States.

cotton diplomacy Confederate plan to enlist England’s aid in return for continued cotton shipments

Section Summary

AMERICANS CHOOSE SIDES

After being elected in 1861, Abraham Lincoln took office as seven southern states left the Union. He promised he would not end slavery where it existed. However, he also promised to preserve the Union.

Confederate officials already were taking control of federal mints, arsenals, and forts. Fighting finally broke out at Fort Sumter, a federal fort in the Confederate state of South Carolina. Federal troops refused to surrender to the Confederacy. Within two days, Fort Sumter fell. Lincoln called for 75,000 militiamen to put down the South’s rebellion.

After Lincoln called for troops, all the states had to choose a side. Four more slave states joined the Confederacy. Four border states—slave states that bordered the North—decided to stay in the Union. In addition, western Virginia broke off from Confederate Virginia to stay in the Union.

Union General Winfield Scott had a two-part strategy to conquer the South. First he would destroy its economy with a naval blockade. Second he would gain control of the Mississippi River to help divide the South.

The Confederacy had its own plan of attack. Part of that plan involved cotton diplomacy—the hope that Britain would support the Confederacy because it needed Confederate cotton. This strategy did not work because Britain had large stores of cotton and got more from India and Egypt.

PREPARING FOR WAR

Neither side was prepared for the war to come. However, many citizens—northern and southern—were eager to help. Thousands upon thousands of young men answered the call to arms and volunteered to serve in both armies.

Civilians, too, volunteered to help. They raised money to aid soldiers and their families. They staffed and supplied emergency hospitals. In the Union alone, about 3,000 women served as army nurses.

Once the thousands of farmers, teachers, laborers, and others joined the armies, they had to be trained to become soldiers. They spent long days drilling and practicing with their guns and bayonets. As a result, many young soldiers were ready to fight.

WAR IN VIRGINIA

In July 1861, the Union and Confederate armies clashed near Manassas Junction, Virginia, along Bull Run Creek. At first the Union soldiers, under General Irvin McDowell, pushed back the left side of the Confederate line. Then Southern troops, inspired by General Thomas “Stonewall” Jackson, fought back. With reinforcements arriving, the Confederate troops drove the Union army back. This conflict, called the First Battle of Bull Run, showed that the war would not be an easy victory for the Union.

How did Jackson earn the nickname “Stonewall”?

After the failed attempt to take Richmond, Lincoln tried again. This time he sent new commander General George B. McClellan. In the spring of 1862, McClellan led 100,000 soldiers on a slow march to Richmond.

Then, in June, General Robert E. Lee took command of the Confederate forces. On June 26 the two armies met in the Seven Days’ Battles. These battles pushed McClellan away from Richmond. During the Second Battle of Bull Run, Jackson’s troops defeated another Union army before it could march directly on Richmond.

BATTLE OF ANTIETAM
A copy of Lee’s battle strategy left behind led to the next major battle of the Civil War. The Union discovered the Confederates were going to attack Harpers Ferry. McClellan sent his troops to stop them. The Battle of Antietam took place on September 17, 1862. It halted Lee’s northward march. Despite this success the battle was the bloodiest of the Civil War and of United States history.

BREAKING THE UNION’S BLOCKADE
Despite the distance it had to control, the Union blockade of Southern ports was very effective. It reduced the number of ships entering southern ports from 6,000 to 800 per year. Even though both sides had the innovation of ironclads, the Union continued the blockade unbroken.

Section Summary

UNION STRATEGY IN THE WEST
In February 1862 General Ulysses S. Grant led a Union army into Tennessee. He was headed toward the Mississippi River to capture outposts that would separate the eastern Confederacy from its western, food-supplying states. On the way Grant and his forces took both Fort Henry and Fort Donelson.

Near Shiloh Church, Grant halted his troops to wait for more soldiers to arrive. Although Grant was aware of Confederate troops in the area, he was caught by surprise when they attacked on April 6. During the two-day Battle of Shiloh, each side lost and gained ground. Union reinforcements arrived and helped push the Confederates into retreating. This win helped the Union control part of the Mississippi River valley.

To control the Mississippi River, the Union had to first deal with New Orleans, the south’s largest city and the valuable port near the mouth of the Mississippi River. However, two forts guarded New Orleans from the south.

Union Admiral David Farragut solved that problem by racing past the two forts in the darkness before dawn on April 24, 1862. Within days New Orleans fell to the Union troops. Farragut continued north, taking more cities, until he reached Vicksburg, Mississippi.

The geography of Vicksburg allowed Confederate General John C. Pemberton to stop any attempt to attack the city. So, instead of trying to attack Vicksburg directly, General Grant cut the city off and shelled it repeatedly. The Siege of Vicksburg lasted about six weeks before hunger forced the Confederates to surrender. The Mississippi River was now under Union control.

STRUGGLE FOR THE FAR WEST
Fighting also broke out in the southwest, as the Confederates tried to take control there. Defeats in Arizona and at Glorieta Pass stopped Confederates from taking lands in the West. Confederate-Union conflicts in Missouri also ended with a Confederate defeat, despite aid from the Cherokee. Attacks on Union forts and raids on towns forced the Union commanders to keep valuable troops stationed in the western states and territories.

1. The Emancipation Proclamation freed slaves in Confederate states.
2. African Americans participated in the war in a variety of ways.
3. President Lincoln faced opposition to the war.
4. Life was difficult for soldiers and civilians alike.

Emancipation Proclamation announcement freeing Confederate slaves contrabands escaped slaves
54th Massachusetts Infantry heroic unit of African American soldiers Copperheads nickname for the Peace Democrats habeas corpus constitutional protection against unlawful imprisonment
Clara Barton army volunteer whose work became the basis for the American Red Cross

Section Summary

EMANCIPATION PROCLAMATION
President Lincoln realized that one way to weaken the South was to free the slaves. Emancipation would free many slaves on which the South’s economy relied. After the Battle of Antietam, Lincoln presented the Emancipation Proclamation. Despite the impossibility of enforcing it in Confederate-held states, the proclamation still had a distinct effect on the war.

AFRICAN AMERICANS PARTICIPATE IN THE WAR
In July 1862 Congress decided to allow African Americans to join the army as laborers. This decision included both free African Americans and contrabands, or escaped slaves. Within a year several African American units had formed. The most famous of these was the 54th Massachusetts Infantry, which helped attack South Carolina’s Fort Wagner.
African American soldiers received less pay than white soldiers. They also faced greater danger because, if captured by Confederates, they could be returned to slavery. In fact Lincoln suggested these soldiers be rewarded by getting the right to vote.

GROWING OPPOSITION

Some mid-westerners did not think the war was necessary. They called themselves Peace Democrats, but their enemies called them Copperheads, after the poisonous snake.

Because he saw them as a threat to the war effort, Lincoln had Copperheads put in jail with no evidence and no trial. To do this he ignored their right of habeas corpus, the constitutional protection against unlawful imprisonment. Despite this and the northern draft, Lincoln won his second election in 1864.

LIFE FOR SOLDIERS AND CIVILIANS

For the soldier both camp life and combat offered dangers. Poor camp conditions, including lack of medicine and painkillers, led to illness. This alone killed more men than battle did. Those wounded or captured in battle often met the same fate.

Those left behind took over the work of the men who went to war. In addition, many women also provided medical care for the soldiers. For example, volunteer Clara Barton formed the organization that would become the American Red Cross.

CHALLENGE ACTIVITY

FREDERICKSBURG AND CHANEILLORSVILLE
In late 1862 Confederate troops under the command of General Robert E. Lee won a battle at Fredericksburg, Virginia. In the spring of 1863, they again defeated Union troops at Chancellorsville.

BATTLE OF GETTYSBURG
Hoping a Confederate win on Union soil would break the Union’s spirit, Lee headed into Union territory. The Battle of Gettysburg, which started July 1, 1863, was the consequence of Lee’s decision.
The first day, Lee’s troops pushed General Meade’s soldiers back. The Union troops had to dig in on top of two hills outside the town. On the second day, Confederate troops tried to take the hill called Little Round Top but failed.

On the third day, Lee ordered General George Pickett to lead a charge on Cemetery Ridge. Pickett’s Charge was a disaster. Over half the Confederates were killed, and Lee retreated. Never again would his troops reach northern land.

President Lincoln helped dedicate a new cemetery at Gettysburg. On November 19, 1863, he delivered the Gettysburg Address.

UNION CAMPAIGNS CRIPPLE THE CONFEDERACY

The Wilderness Campaign was a series of battles fought in Virginia, around Richmond. Although he lost more men than Lee, Grant also had more reinforcements. As a result of the battles, Grant was winning the war. However, at Petersburg, Lee’s defenses did not allow Grant to execute his attack and capture Richmond.

To assure his re-election, Lincoln needed a victory. General William Tecumseh Sherman provided it by capturing Atlanta, Georgia. This victory helped Lincoln get re-elected in a landslide.

Sherman did not stop at Atlanta. He ordered his troops to cut a path of destruction through Georgia, practicing total war all the way to the ocean.

THE SOUTH SURRENDERS

On April 9, 1865, at Appomattox Courthouse, Lee officially surrendered to Grant. The long, bloody war was over, but the question of how the United States could be united again remained.

Section Summary

PLANNING RECONSTRUCTION

As soon as the Civil War ended, Reconstruction began. Reconstruction was the process of reuniting the nation and rebuilding the southern states.

President Lincoln proposed that southerners be offered amnesty, or an official pardon. Southerners had to swear an oath of loyalty to the United States and accept the ban on slavery. When 10 percent of the voters in any state took the oath, that state could be accepted back into the Union. This was called the Ten Percent Plan.

Some supported the Wade-Davis Bill instead. The procedure of the Wade-Davis Bill asked southerners to ban slavery. However, under this bill, most of... the people of a state would have to take the pledge before the state could rejoin the Union. Also, only southerners who swore they had never supported the Confederacy could run for office. Lincoln vetoed it.

FREEDOM FOR AFRICAN AMERICANS

In 1865 the Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution officially outlawed slavery in the nation. Former slaves reacted to freedom in many ways. They legalized their marriages, searched for relatives who had been sold, took last names, and moved to new places.

THE FREEDMEN’S BUREAU

In 1865 Congress created the Freedmen’s Bureau to help the South’s poor and freedpeople. One of its roles was to build more schools. Some freedpeople also established their own schools. Although some southerners violently resisted the idea of educating African Americans, freedpeople of all ages attended classes.

PRESIDENT JOHNSON’S RECONSTRUCTION PLAN

On April 14, 1865, President Lincoln was shot while attending the theater. He died the next morning. Vice President Andrew Johnson became the next president. Johnson’s Reconstruction plan included a way to restructure southern state governments. States that followed the steps were to be readmitted to the Union.

Most of the southern states followed Johnson’s plan, but Congress refused to accept them back into the Union. Many of the elected representatives of the “new” states had been Confederate leaders. Clearly there were still problems to be solved.

Section Summary

THE BLACK CODES
Almost as soon as the southern states created new legislatures, those legislatures went to work passing Black Codes. The Black Codes were laws that greatly limited the freedom of African Americans. In fact, the codes created working conditions that resembled slavery for African Americans. Many African Americans organized to protest against the codes.

The Black Codes angered many Republicans who believed the South was returning to its old ways. One group, known as the Radical Republicans, wanted the federal government to step in. They wanted more federal control over Reconstruction to make sure southern leaders did not remain loyal to the old Confederate principles. One Radical Republican leader was Pennsylvania’s Thaddeus

THE FOURTEENTH AMENDMENT
In 1866 Congress proposed a bill to give more power to the Freedmen’s Bureau. President Johnson vetoed it. He did not believe Congress could pass new laws until the southern states were represented in Congress.

Then Congress proposed the Civil Rights Act of 1866. It guaranteed African Americans the same legal rights as whites. Johnson vetoed this, too. Congress overrode the veto. It also proposed the Fourteenth Amendment to secure these protections.

CONGRESS TAKES CHARGE
After the 1866 elections, Republicans held a two-thirds majority in both the House and Senate. As a result, Congress passed several Reconstruction Acts. It also passed a law limiting the president’s powers to remove cabinet members without Senate approval. When President Johnson broke that law by firing his secretary of war, Congress reacted by impeaching the president. The impeachment fell short by one vote. Johnson remained president, though he had little authority or influence.

THE FIFTEENTH AMENDMENT
Republicans believed that African Americans would support the Reconstruction plan. To gain their votes, Republicans in Congress proposed the Fifteenth Amendment, which guaranteed African American men the right to vote. This amendment went into effect in 1870.

Section Summary

RECONSTRUCTION GOVERNMENTS
After the Civil War, some northern Republicans moved to the South. They were not trusted by southerners who thought the Republicans had come to profit from Reconstruction. African Americans used their new right to vote to elect more than 600 African Americans, including the first black senator, Hiram Revels. Together they worked to rebuild the war-damaged South.

OPPOSITION TO RECONSTRUCTION
Many southerners opposed Reconstruction. In 1866 a group of them created the secret and violent Ku Klux Klan. Its targets were African Americans, Republicans, and public officials. The Klan spread throughout the South until the federal government stepped in and passed laws that made Klan activities illegal. Violence, however, continued.

THE ELECTION OF 1876
The General Amnesty Act of 1872 allowed most former Confederates to serve in public office. Soon many Democratic ex-Confederates were elected. Republicans also lost power as a consequence of Grant’s problem-plagued presidency and the Panic of 1873. In 1876 the Hayes-Tilden presidential race was so close it took the Compromise of 1877 to make sure Democats would accept Hayes’s election.

Southern Democrats, called Redeemers, worked to limit African American rights. The methods they used included poll taxes, legal segregation, and Jim Crow laws. They even got help from the Supreme Court, which ruled in Plessy v. Ferguson that segregation was legal.

FARMING AND THE “NEW SOUTH” MOVEMENT
Most African Americans could not afford to buy land. So many began sharecropping, or sharing the crop with landowners. Often, only the landowner profited, and sharecroppers lived in debt.

The South’s economy depended on cotton profits, which went up and down. In the “New South” movement, southern leaders turned toward industry to strengthen the economy. Many new textile mills and factories were built. With cheap labor, industry thrived to help southern economies grow stronger.
